FOREWORD

WITHIN THE COVERS OF THIS BOOK, THE 1922 VOLUME OF THE CALYX, WE HAVE ENDEAVORED TO INCLUDE THOSE RECORDS OF THE PAST YEAR WHICH WE BELIEVE, IN THE YEARS TO COME, WILL SERVE AS PLEASANT MEMORIES FOR THE MEMBERS OF OUR CLASS, AND WILL CALL FORTH THE WONDROUS REMINISCENCES OF THEIR UNDERGRADUATE DAYS. THERE IS NO DOUBT THAT WE HAVE FAILED TO INCLUDE RECORDS OF INCIDENTS, PERSONALITIES, AND PLACES THAT ARE DEAR TO THE HEARTS OF MANY. FOR THIS, WE ARE INDEED SORRY, AND IF IT SHOULD HAPPEN THAT IN SO DOING WE HAVE OFFENDED ANYONE, WE TAKE THIS OPPORTUNITY TO BEG FORGIVENESS. THE WEALTH AND QUANTITY OF MATERIAL FOR A BOOK SUCH AS THIS CANNOT BE MEASURED, AND IT IS INDEED NO LIGHT TASK TO ELIMINATE FROM ITS PAGES ALL EXTRANEOUS MATTER. WE REALIZE THE POSSIBILITY OF OVER-DOING ANY CERTAIN SUBJECT, AND IN SPITE OF OUR EFFORTS, PARTS OF THE BOOK MAY PROVE UNINTERESTING AND EVEN TIRESOME TO SOME—THUS DEFEATING OUR PRIMARY AIM TO COMPILE A CONCISE AND RELEVANT RECORD. IF WE HAVE BEEN ABLE TO PLACE BEFORE YOU THE MATERIAL IN OUR POSSESSION IN A COHERENT AND SATISFACTORY MANNER, WE HAVE ACCOMPLISHED OUR PURPOSE, AND WE HOPE THAT EDITORS OF THE CALYX IN FUTURE YEARS WILL RECEIVE BOTH AID AND INSPIRATION FROM OUR SUCCESSES AND FAILURES.

Dedication

To

Edgar Finley Shannon, Ph.D.

In respect and admiration for his scholarly attainments and inspiring personality This 1922 Volume of the Calyx Is Dedicated

DOCTOR EDGAR FINLEY SHANNON, Professor of English at Washington and Lee, was born in Bourbon County, Kentucky, September 19, 1874, the son of James Butler Shannon and Lois Vashti McCain, his wife.

Passing his early life in the bluegrass section of Kentucky, he there developed the strength of will and purpose and the length of body that are said to be the natural products of that portion of our country.

After the customary secondary school training of the time and place of his boyhood, he entered Centre College, where he graduated in 1893 with the B.A. degree.

Following this, he took up the profession of teaching, and in 1895, joined the Faculty of the University of Arkansas as Associate Professor of Ancient Languages, becoming, in 1902, Associate Professor of English and Modern Languages; in 1906, Professor of English, and in 1913, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. In 1914, he came to Washington and Lee as Professor of English and Head of the English Department, which position he continues to hold.

But to his professorial duties at Arkansas, he joined the continued zeal of the student, and so, in 1902, he received the Master's degree from Havard, from which University he likewise, in 1912, graduated with the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. During the same period, he found time, also, for travel and study in Europe.

In 1904 he married Mary Eleanor Duncan, of Fayetteville, Ark., whose charming personality, joined to that of Doctor Shannon's mother, continues to make his house a home.

Doctor Shannon is an Elder of the Presbyterian Church, South, and a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, Sigma Upsilon, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Phi Beta Kappa.

Since coming to Washington and Lee, Doctor Shannon has continually grown in the esteem and affection of both his students and his colleagues of the Faculty. He is sane, sensible, and scholarly, and possessed of a fund of humor that allows him to enjoy a joke even if it be at his own expense, which same is held by many to be the final test of a human being.

Well versed in the Classics, Doctor Shannon is soundly trained in English, and is an authority on Chaucer, whose words in regard to the Clerk of Oxenford picture well Doctor Shannon, for: "Gladly wole he lerne and gladly teche."

Doctor Shannon has two pets and one pet aversion; the two pets being Edgar, junior (aged three), and Chaucer; his pet aversion, slovenly work. For, himself an accurate scholar and an accurate thinker, he cannot and does not bear with inaccurate thinking or unscholarly work. He is a continual seeker after truth, and while a staunch believer in the various extra-curricula activities of college life, he, as being himself a productive scholar whose articles are published with pleasure and read with profit, holds firmly to the thesis that the main business of the college or the university is the production of thoughtful scholarship joined to those other qualities of soul and spirit that make the youth that which Doctor Shannon himself is:—in truth a man.

Ship me back to old Virginia,
Where the summer skies are blue,
Where the gods walk on the hilltops,
In the sunset's rosy hue.

For I've heard their voices calling,
And it's there that I would be,
In the shadow of the mountains,
Back at Washington and Lee.

By the banks of old North River,
Winding lazy round the hill,
To the dear old College Campus,
My thoughts are turning still.

For the college bells are calling,
And I know they say to me,
Come you back, you old Alumnus,
Back to Washington and Lee.

"Manhood made thee,
Honor stayed thee,
By truth thou shalt prevail,
Bowered in beauty, built on duty,
Washington and Lee, all hail."

"From the old South Gate."

"Go search among your idle dreams,
Your busy or your vain extremes,
And find a life of equal bliss,
Or own the next begun in this."

"The thought of our past years, in me doth breed perpetual benediction."

"Here, where the world is quiet;
Here, where all the trouble seems
Dead winds' and spent waves' riot
In doubtful dreams of dreams."

"Towards the East at Sunrise."

"Washington and Lee, all Hail,
Hail this, our glorious team,
Now altogether we will prevail,
So let the echo ring."

"Be it ours to meditate
In these calm shades. . . . . "
"Thy sights shall cheer the weary traveler's toil,
And joy shall hail me to my native soil."

"Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend."

"Where once my careless childhood strayed,
A stranger yet to pain."

"Though friendships fail and friends be few,
We'll love thee still, our Alma Mater,
Our dear old W and L U."

"Through the Columns."

"Climbing up to meet the blue,
Stands our trophied school,
Honor is its heritage,
Chivalry its rule."

"Seat of my youth where every sport could please."

"Natural Bridge—not on the Campus, but near it."

The Outlook

SINCE the disorganization of the war and the doleful days of the S. A. T. C., the progress of Washington and Lee has been almost meteoric, especially when we consider the business depression of the whole South during the past eighteen months.

The popularity of Washington and Lee both with the public and in educational circles is rapidly increasing. The number of students applying for admission, in spite of rigid entrance requirements and unusual tuition fees, has far surpassed the accommodations of the University, with each year breaking all previous records. The Million-Dollar Campaign is drawing to its close in a blaze of glory with over $1,300,000 already subscribed. The alumni have employed a permanent secretary, the athletics of the institution are on a firmer footing and under better management than ever before, the relations between student-body and faculty are most cordial and harmonious, and the whole institution is permeated with an atmosphere of enthusiasm and hopefulness.

The editors of the South with singular unanimity and enthusiasm have undertaken to re-establish and endow General Lee's original School of Journalism; The United Daughters of the Confederacy are raising money over the whole United States to make the Lee Chapel in architectural beauty and stateliness worthy of the sacred dust it enshrines; and the whole South is waking anew to a realization of the fact that Washington and Lee is the one All-Southern historic institution, independent of Church and State divisions, which is to serve as the fruitful nursery of Southern and National leadership through coming generations.

The Traditions of Washington and Lee

SO much has been said at various times about the traditions of schools, that we feel we must say a word for Washington and Lee in this regard. We believe, frankly, that it is the traditions of the school, living on after their beginnings in associations with such men as George Washington and General Robert E. Lee, that differentiates Washington and Lee from all other universities.

Traditions must ultimately find their bases in history. Listen to the history from which our traditions and our ideals are drawn.

Early in the eighteenth century, a stream of Scotch-Irish immigrants began to spread over the mountainous parts of Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia. The settlers in Augusta County, Va., in 1749, established a school about fifteen miles southwest of what is now the City of Staunton, and called it the Augusta Academy. In 1776 the name Augusta Academy was changed to Liberty Hall, and in 1780 the school was moved to the immediate vicinity of Lexington.

Through the influence of Mr. Graham, its principal, Liberty Hall was incorporated by the Legislature of Virginia in 1782 as Liberty Hall Academy. It had been for a short time under the care of the Presbytery of Hanover, but it received now a charter, under the terms of which the board of trustees became independent and self-perpetuating. In 1793 a stone building was erected in which Mr. Graham labored until his resignation in 1796.

The first important gift received by Liberty Hall Academy was conferred by George Washington. In recognition of his services in the Revolution, the Legislature of Virginia presented him in 1784 with a number of shares in a canal company. Washington would not accept these for his own benefit, but turned them over to Liberty Hall to which his attention had been called. The generous gift was accepted by the trustees, who acknowledged the gift, following an act of the legislature in 1798, changing the name of the school to Washington Academy. The property thus bestowed on Washington Academy still yields an annual income of three thousand dollars to Washington and Lee University.

The bequest of Washington served to inspire another gift. The Cincinnati Society was an organization of surviving officers of the Revolutionary War, with a branch in each of the several States. In 1802 the Virginia Society decided to disband. Inspired by the example of Washington, the Society bestowed its funds to the value of about twenty-five thousand dollars upon the academy.

In December, 1802, the academy building was destroyed by fire, and in 1803 the work of the school was conducted in rented buildings within the limits of Lexington. Before the end of 1804 a building was constructed on the grounds of the present university, from which the ruins of the old academy are still visible, a half-mile from Washington College, this being the next title the school was to assume by act of the legislature.

An important impulse was received through the bequest of over forty-six thousand dollars by John Robinson, a native of Ireland and a soldier under Washington.

Soon after the outbreak of the Civil War, the work of the college was discontinued, most of its students enlisting in the Confederate Army under the name of the Liberty Hall Volunteers. The buildings and other property were much injured during the federal occupation of Lexington in June, 1864. About thirty years later, remuneration was granted by Congress for the destruction of property.

At the close of the war, the college without income borrowed money on the private credit of some of the trustees for the repair of buildings. Rehabilitation was now begun. On August 4, 1865, General Robert E. Lee was elected president, and was formally installed in October. During his administration of five years the growth of the college in numbers and influence was phenomenal. In the rear of the chapel which he built, a mausoleum was subsequently erected in which his remains are interred. Over them is a recumbent statue of him in marble, by the sculptor, Valentine.

In 1849 a law school was founded in Lexington by Judge John W. Brockenbrough. Under the influence of General Lee the Lexington Law School became, in 1866, the "School of Law and Equity of Washington College", with Judge Brockenbrough as professor in charge.

Soon after the death of General Lee, in 1871, the name of Washington College was changed to its present corporate title, "The Washington and Lee University".

From such meagre beginnings have grown the traditions, the ideals, the character, and the progressiveness of the University.

Considering the wonderful inspirational assets of Washington and Lee, we need not be surprised at its nationalism. Although located in the very focus of Southern History and tradition, its campus has become the meeting-ground for North, South, East, and West, where a universal friendliness knows no difference between parties, sections, or religions. Of the 770 students enrolled in 1921-22, 430, or more than two-thirds, are from outside Virginia. Three-fourths of the University's endowment and equipment are National rather than Southern in origin. The extraordinary influence of its alumni in national affairs, from the time of Meriwether Lewis to the present, bears witness to the national spirit engendered within its walls.

Throughout the history of the institution, Washington and Lee has been a center of ardent patriotism and Evangelical religion. Its sons exemplified the spirit of their Alma Mater on the fields of the Revolution. In 1861 they left the campus in a body as the Liberty Hall Volunteers, and shed their blood on a score of the battle-fields during the dark days of the Civil War. Lately, the horrors of France and Flanders were braved by its thousand representatives in the military service.

In Independence and Progressiveness Washington and Lee is unique among Southern institutions. It stands almost alone in its entire independence of Church and State. Deeply and evangelically Christian in its founders and presidents, its local environment, its ideals and traditions, it is governed by a self-perpetuating board and is under no denominational control. Although located in the heart of Virginia and itself a shrine of Southern tradition, it is entirely independent of Virginia politics or legislative control.

Washington and Lee was the first school in America to recognize journalism as a profession, and established regular courses in this department. The first endowed School of Commerce in the South was founded at Washington and Lee with its own faculty, building, library, and reading-room. It is also one of the very few Southern institutions which for many years has allowed a student to substitute modern languages and take an A.B. degree without either Greek or Latin. In the freedom of its elective system, its universal physical training, and its fifteen-unit requirement for entrance, it also follows National rather than Southern customs and standards.

We call Washington and Lee, therefore, A NATIONAL INSTITUTION located in the shrine of Southern tradition, A CENTER OF PATRIOTISM since Colonial times, yet independent of State or party politics, A LOYALLY CHRISTIAN INSTITUTION, yet independent of Church control.

Bradford Scholarship, '20; Franklin Society Scholarship, '10; German Scholarship, '18; Secretary Graham Washington Literary Society, '21; Instructor in English, '21-'22; Member Debating Council.*

John W. Bowyer was born in Rockbridge County within the sound of the old college bell, whose hourly ringing, year in and year out, early impressed upon his youthful mind the place where he was destined to seek achievement. Having accumulated various honors and scholarships at the Lexington High School, "Johnny" entered Washington and Lee in the Fall of 1917.

He soon distinguished himself as belonging to that exclusive group known as "sharks", whose wearisome duty it is to trail around a string of A's, scholarships, and grade the papers of their more fortunate fellows. To make a long story short, he secured his B.A. along with Phi Beta Kappa in 1921, and now holds the University's highest scholastic honor—the Howard Houston Fellowship. John has been a leader in literary and journalistic work, being for 1922 the Editor of the CALYX, a position held by but few of the "home-town boys."

WILLIAM TIPTON CALDWELL

Tiptonville, Tennessee

Φ Β Κ; Instructor in History; Latin Scholarship, '18-'19; History Scholarship, '19-'20; Varsity Track Team, '20-'21; Varsity Cross Country Team, '19-'20; Monogram, '21.

"Tip" is one of our shining lights in scholastic paths, and "many were the hearts" that were glad to see his return as history instructor. He did in three years what others take four years to accomplish, never failing to make the Honor Roll during that time. History was his special delight.

Time for study and time for play is in "Tip's" make-up and he created no slight effulgence in his track work on the Cross Country and Varsity Track teams, making his monogram on the latter.

His earnestness of purpose, strength of character, and brilliant scholarship, assure him eminent success in the law profession which he intends to follow, after taking his law course at Harvard.

FITZGERALD FLOURNOY, B.A.

"Fitz" entered W. and L. in 1916 and received his B.A. last June. He was absent from college one year on account of illness contracted from the Service. His baccalaureate career was marked with distinct success and he early distinguished himself as a scholar, an orator, and a debater. His range of activity was a wide one, and he accomplished each task with a brilliance most extraordinary and with which he won a name for himself and his college.

He will complete his work for his Master's degree in June, and early next fall will take residence at Oxford as Virginia's Rhodes Scholar. His interests have now absorbed themselves in poetry and the study of Southern History. He stands, we believe, on the threshold of a great career—a worthy son of Virginia and Washington and Lee.

GARLAND GRAY, B.A.

Waverly, Virginia

Φ K Σ

Behold "Peck"—not a specie of "Peck's Bad Boy", but our old friend "Peck" Gray. After receiving the degree of A.B. at Richmond College "Peck", still ambitious for higher culture, came to Washington and Lee to be decorated with his M.A. degree. Incidentally we might mention the fact that he is one of the youngest, if not the youngest, student ever awarded the M.A. degree at Washington and Lee, and of course, needless to say, as a student, "Peck" is one of the first rank. With a likable personality, ability to make friends, the power of perseverance, and a genial make-up, we are sure that his success in the future will be attained.

Though "Peck" has only been with us for one year, and his stay a short one, we sincerely wish that he would make it a longer visit. How about an LL.B., "Peck"?

DANIEL THOMAS ORDEMAN, B.A.

Frederick, Maryland

Π K X (Hopkins); Assistant in Education

"Scoby"again makes his entrance into Washington and Lee circles. Well do we remember the Fall of 1918, when he first came here, after attending Johns Hopkins for two years. In the Spring of 1920, he left us with that long-coveted diploma. After spending one year imparting his knowledge to the future citizens of Maryland, he is back with us again, getting the highest degree this Institution can confer. And yet his ambition soars still higher, and some time in the near future we hope and expect to hear great things of "Professor" Ordeman.

To the older students, who know him intimately, Ordeman is a "regular" fellow. Possessing a quiet dignity and reserve, a fine sense of humor, and a love of justice and right, he is the type of man that Washington and Lee needs on her Campus. It is with a feeling of admiration and pride, and not of sadness, that Washington and Lee sees him leave, for she knows he will reflect glory and honor on her name.

Hailing from the thriving metropolis of Graham, "Wick" entered with the rest of us on that long journey through Tucker Hall. Frequently, perhaps, the cold winds from House Mountain have turned his thoughts to the comfortable haunts of his home town, yet he has stayed on in spite of all discouragements.

"Andy" has a personality which has won for him a place in the hearts of his classmates. Unlike most fellows, he has a place in his heart for those who are down, and he is ever willing to render aid. His records in the Service, and his record on the sun-baked fields of France go far to prove his stability.

He has been an ardent student, and well, too, does he deserve the credit and praise which has been given him. As the good fellow, the hard worker, and the true friend you have been to us, "Andy," we have a good hunch that when they call the roll in the Hall of Fame some day, they will tell you to "guide right."

"That ain't getting me a berry" quotes "Baldy"—the business staff of the Mink must be suffering another bawling out.

"Ben" dropped in on the Academic School from the University of Michigan in the Fall of 1916. Becoming exasperated at things in particular, he left us the next spring to join the Federal Ambulance Corps. Later he transferred to the Washington and Lee Unit, with which outfit he saw eighteen months' service overseas. After his discharge, "Baldy" again appeared on the Campus as a disciple of Blackstone.

After making the leading honorary societies on the Campus he was not satisfied until he was raised to rank of captain of the "Three Goofs", and at last achieved glory for all his posterity by being elected manager of the Mink.

With due respect, his contemplated matrimonial ties may make his success in life doubtful, but we are confident that the Diplomatic Service of the United States will certainly take notice of his graduation.

The friends that you've made on the Campus,
Are many and close, tried and true;
You've cared for the weak and disabled,
Our hats are off, "Baldy", to you.

Cyril Edmund Burke

Κ Σ; Κ Β Φ; President Junior Law; Varsity Baseball.

"Curley" was acquired by Washington and Lee in the Fall of 1919, and has indeed proved an asset. He had been a midshipman at Uncle Sam's Naval Academy for two years, and he is still right "sea-going." Soon after his arrival he was elected President of the Junior Law Class.

As an athlete he has shown great ability as a second baseman on the varsity nine, and he has no mean ability as a boxer, as the erstwhile champion of an A. E. F. division learned to his sorrow. If anything, "Curley" is too scrappy, as he has sometimes shown at the dances.

He and "Red" Schneider are inseparable buddies, and woe to the man who draws their keen witticisms on his head. Their wit is original and worthy of Mark Twain.

Underneath "Curley's" joking manner his friends find a generous, whole-hearted, affable disposition, and consider themselves fortunate in the possession of his friendship. His personality will win for him success in whatever future he chooses.

M. C. A. Cabinet, '17-'18-'19; President Press Club, '20-'21.*

With the determination of Ponce de Leon searching for the fountain of youth, Eddie is on the trail of the fountain of knowledge. Not satisfied with graduating in 1918 with the highest honors, Eddie delivered the valedictory of his class and shortly afterwards was located in Camp Taylor. The war over, Eddie wandered up to Cambridge long enough to show up the Harvard boys, and attach an M.A., by way of a souvenir. Our hero came back to W. and L. and organized his department of Public Speaking which he administered so ably while obtaining a law degree on the side. Now a mere youth of twenty-three, Eddie has three degrees hanging to his belt, and will doubtless soon be in hot pursuit of the elusive Ph. D.

Not only as a student have honors come to Eddie. He put out the best Ring-tum Phi ever issued. As President and a member of the Press Club he sent tales of our University abroad over the land. To tell of Eddie's honors would fill much more space than has been allotted, but a glance at the enumeration of them is impressive.

"Skeet" is one of the many mountain lads from West Virginia that have come to Washington and Lee looking for "worlds to conquer", and wishing to add their names to the list of "Who's Who in West Virginia." He soon found that his first task was to decorate the halls of the Law School with his smiling face. While spending his time in Tucker Hall he has learned most of the law, and what he has not learned he knows where to find. He found that this did not occupy all his time, so we find him at McCrum's and the pool room occasionally.

Say, did you ever see "Skeet" pick the winners in the football world? He has a line on all of them, and when he picks a winner you can rely upon it. In fact, he is a lover of all kinds of sport, and is a mainstay at the old Doremus when the dances are holding sway.

Fisher, if you make friends in the future as fast as you have made them here, we are sure of a great success in your chosen profession, and none of us expect anything else.

THEODORE KING FOUNTAIN

Raleigh, North Carolina

KA; ΠΑΝ; Troubadours.

"T. K." needs no introduction to the public, especially to those in the Southern cities and towns, for he introduced himself along with the "All-Southern Seven" in the Summer of 1921. Since arriving here, he has given his tireless services to different organizations about the Campus. The Troubadours recognized his musical talents at the beginning, and he has been associated with them ever since.

When he entered Washington and Lee he was a very enthusiastic young man, for he bought a lot of books that he would never use. His motto is "Study little, but hit 'em hard," and he has certainly lived up to it.

His ability to make friends, his sense of humor, and his keen insight coupled with his knowledge of the law, guarantee success for him in his chosen profession.

"Cy" came to W. and L. in the Fall of 1919 after a very successful career at Princeton Prep School, where, besides being the most popular boy in school, he held such positions as captain of the football team, and Chairman of the Student Government Committee.

He has continued his record at W. and L. A leader in student activities, a diligent student, and a worker for the betterment of Washington and Lee. A complete list of his activities would be too lengthy to relate here.

His interests are not centered alone at W. and L., for he is a strong supporter of West Virginia, growing eloquent on many occasions upon that subject. His occasional visits to New York have not gone amiss either, though he does not tell us exactly what his interests are there.

"Cy" leaves us this year to begin the practice of law in his home town. We will miss his sound advice, and his all-around good-fellowship, but we join in wishing him the best of luck.

In the Fall of 1919, "Chick" came to the Campus of Washington and Lee and has returned every Fall since. He is one of the men who has found time to do everything, including his work in Tucker Hall. He is planning to take up the study of law in his own home town, possibly getting a few pointers on Illinois law at the University of Illinois before he challenges the world by "hanging out his shingle."

"Chick's" warm and delightful congeniality has gained him many friends on the Campus and in Lexington, and his long strides and hearty "hey's" will be missed next fall. We know that he will have a breeze of his own blowing along the windy banks of the windy Mississippi, especially in the vicinity of Alton, ere long.

"Shorty" hails from the Mountains of West Virginia, but refuses to be called a "mountaineer". Just why, we can't exactly figure out.

Tucker Hall has been the stamping place of this youth, and when he leaves it we predict that his smiling face and the perfume of his ever-faithful pipe will be missed.

However, his activities have not been limited to the pursuit of legal knowledge, for he took advantage of his size and his skill at commandeering, and made with ease in 1920 the Coxswain of the Harry Lee Crew.

Henderson expects to enter business after leaving us, and his legal knowledge and ability to win friends will insure his success in whatever he undertakes. He hasn't told us, but we will guess that a fair one is waiting for him somewhere back in West Virginia.

George Cury Hepburn

Φ Κ Ψ; Φ Α Δ; S. & C.; W. F.; President Senior Law Class; Albert Sidney Boat Club.

Fortunate West Virginia is the proud claimant of this brilliant son. George possesses that irresistible personality which commands the love and respect of all with whom he comes in contact. The qualities of dominating will and spotless character marked him from the first as a leader on the Campus: these same sterling qualities in after life will select him as a leader of men.

"Hep's" brilliance and scholastic life do not in the least overshadow his social attainments. He is a constant and inexhaustible source of delight at all the dances; he has won the hearts of all the girls with whom he has secured after-dance dates, and broken down and wept because he had no others to conquer.

If hard work, honesty of purpose, and uprightness of character count for anything, George's classmates and friends can see nothing ahead of him but a future filled with brilliant success.

Yes! 'tis Jackson—not Stonewall—but our old friend, Edgar. "Jack" came to Washington and Lee in 1919 after serving overseas with Uncle Sam's doughboys. Prior to entering the Service, "Jack" attended Randolph-Macon College where he received his B.A. and M.A. degrees, and ambitious for still more culture he entered our Law School for his LL.B. Although a lawyer by choice, "Jack" is a literary genius by nature and has proved his ability with the pen in his loyal work and worthwhile contributions to all college publications. With the determination to do worthwhile things and his ability to do them, "Jack" will without doubt be found in the list of "Who is Who" from Virginia, and we are looking forward to seeing his name high in his legal profession.

"Jack" is a soldier, a scholar, a true blue friend, and last but not least a gentleman. In the future, "Jack" we are certain that you will be successful, and we want you to know that in all your success we rejoice, as your sincere friends.

When the harsh fall winds swept down from the North in 1919, they deposited on our Campus, one "Hoot," of the Belle Vernon Joneses. Having tried a year at Lehigh, he followed the footsteps of his brother, "Squatty," and Washington and Lee lists one more Keystoner on her roster.

Although "Hoot's" visits to Corporations are few and far between, and his love for Contracts undying, we will not be surprised to hear of him before the Supreme Court, either on or involved in a big case. From the looks of his room and the hole in the floor, "Hoot's" love for artillery is superseded only by his love for his fellow Gold-Dust twin. "Hoot's" three years at Washington and Lee have made a firm place for him in our hearts. Having found him a man among men, we entertain no fears for his future success. Knowing the value of a glad hand and an ever-ready smile, "Hoot's" graduation in June will be an irreparable loss to Washington and Lee. So long, "Hoot."

Washington and Lee is under great obligations to Cornell, because they sent us "Jimmie." After winning success along every line at that noted institution in the Empire State, he returned to the Southland in 1919, to gain knowledge once again within the borders of his native State.

Cape Charles is justly proud of its representative in Washington and Lee, and this institution will be just as proud to call "Jimmie" an alumnus, because if he accomplishes things in after life as he has accomplished them here, he will spend most of the time getting his success on record for others to follow.

"Jimmie" leaves us this year as our idea of a real Southern gentleman. We wish him every success in the legal profession, and also in Richmond, because Cupid always comes to her own, you know.

Allan Oliver Lambert

"Oscar" hails from Norfolk, Virginia, where he attended Maury High School for four years. After graduating with honors from this well-known high school, in the Spring of 1919, he immediately decided to enter the W. and L. Law School.

When the doors of Tucker Hall were opened in the following fall, the great Atlantic seaport was represented in that grand rush for admission by one of her brilliant and stalwart sons.

"Oscar" is regarded as one of the most diligent students in the Law School. He evidently prepares his daily work with "white-hot concentration." He never answers "unprepared," and he can quote the law with performed accuracy. However his activities have not been confined to law alone, as he makes frequent trips to Sweetbriar and other nearby amusement centers.

He is the kind of fellow that one likes to meet, to be with, and is sure to remember. He is one of the most highly respected and best loved men in the class of '22. and we predict for him a brilliant career before the bar of the Old Dominion.

Vincenzo Messina
Brooklyn, New York

"Good morning, Prince; how's the Prince thees-a morning?" Messina calls us "Prince" because we address him as "Count." We haven't discovered whether or not the "Count" was a member of the Italian nobility before coming to America, but we know that there is a great deal that is noble about him. One cannot resist his contagious smile and his hearty laugh. Whenever we behold his face wreathed in smiles—and that is all the time—we think of the sun-crowned Italian hills with their vineyards and olive trees gleaming in the level light, and the apricot clouds above them. The "Count" is a sure cure for the blues, because the sunshine in him just naturally radiates comfort and cheer.

Messina is with us again this session, since New York requires that the prospective barrister spend three years in a Law School. Every morning he is heard to say, "Meester Moreland, I don't-a beleeve," etc. The "Count" is a member of the A. E. F. Club, having served nearly a year in France during the late war.

Mr. Peck—he needs no introduction; suffice it to say he is the famous Lidell Peck, actor, producer, dancer, lawyer, etc. To enumerate his contributions in talent and ability to the University would be futile. Lidell has been stepfather of the Troubadours, and his departure from college will create a vacancy that will be hard to fill. From the ridiculous (the stage) to the sublime (Tucker Hall) he migrates daily, so at present we cannot definitely place his goal.

His splendid personality and self-sacrificing manner has made him a friend of the entire Student Body. His choice as the leader of the Fancy Dress Ball met with general approbation throughout the Student Body—and we all agree that his ball was the best yet. He also holds offices in various other social clubs here.

Among the resources of California we unhesitatingly add our David Belasco, our John Marshall—Jess Lidell Peck.

LOVE BONHAM ROUSE

Σ Φ E

History tells us that "Love" was born in Chilhowie, Virginia, somewhere in the southwestern part of the "Old Dominion." Later we hear of him living in Marion. No, friends, he has never had anything to do with a certain institution there, but just went there to put the town on the map, which we all know he did.

"Love" relegated his allegiance to Fork Union Military Academy, and during his sojourn there he was a member of a number of athletic teams. After this preparatory work he decided to come to Washington and Lee, and we are all glad that he did.

This proud son leaves us this year, and in the future his ready smile and his congeniality will be conspicuous by their absence. While here he has won the admiration of all, and his many friends hate to see him leave.

"Red," who is described by the fair sex as "that big, handsome red-headed boy," came to W. and L. in 1920, after having spent several years at the University of Virginia and a year or two with Uncle Sam's army in France. He has done more than his share to make life on the Campus pleasanter through the medium of his extraordinary wit. "Curly" Burke and he have always been "buddies," and their original and unequalled "nonsense" has made them justly famous.

He is a stellar basketball player and won his letter at Virginia, which was our hard luck, since it made him ineligible last year.

Few men in school are better known or better liked than "Red." He is a man clean through, and one is fortunate to have him for a friend. We prophesy a brilliant future for him as a legal light of the first magnitude.

"It's an ill wind that blows nobody good," but there we are begging the question. "Streep" didn't just "blow in," for when he left the "Old Prairie State," he left upon his own volition, impelled by one motive: to get a knowledge of the Law and incidentally have his cognomen inscribed upon a sheepskin.

"Streep" was prepared for his work in Tucker Hall, at Alton High School. We cannot imagine why he has chosen the legal profession, except probably for one reason: his father being an undertaker he must have anticipated the "dull seasons," and, characteristic of lawyers, was forward looking enough to provide for it. But we do know that after the coronation of America's "Uncrowned Queen", "Streep" is to settle down to the practice of his chosen profession, and our best regards are for him.

George Walton Taliaferro

Harrisonburg, Virginia

Φ Κ Σ; Π Α Ν; Φ Α Δ

For three years George has delved in legal lore, being a familiar figure among those misguided youths who spend their days in Tucker Hall. After his stirring career in the army he needed the calm and quiet of classic walls to soothe his shattered nerves. While not exactly what you might call a profound student of the law, he is nevertheless a faithful worker, capable of focusing his attention upon intricate problems and arriving at solutions which nearest satisfy the requirements of justice and rules of reason.

Of all the men Harrisonburg has sent to the University, none has been more popular than George Taliaferro. His frankness is most refreshing—there is no duplicity about George. Add to his frankness a sunny disposition, an even temper, and a lovable personality, and you have a character which cannot fail to attract to him a host of friends. That George will succeed in his profession we know full well, for he will take out into life those qualities which have brought him success on the Campus.

The career of "Charley" Terry at W. and L. has been brief, yet of such a nature that in the future it will long endear him to the hearts of his friends. For during his short stay with us he has been able to reach that goal for which many strive in vain.

After a successful "prepping" at Swarthmore, where he was a stellar member of the football, basketball, and baseball teams, "Charley" entered Swarthmore College during the S. A. T. C. The next year the University of Virginia was the fortunate Alma Mater of this cosmopolitan connoisseur of scholastic curriculums. However, aware of the "error of his ways," Terry deigned to bestow upon W. and L. the substance of his talents, by entering the law school in the Fall of '20.

"Charley" will find that his stable characteristics of a proficient athlete, good student, and mature gentleman, will in after life be even a greater asset to him than he has found them while in college.

"Max" came to us from the Hill City, a star pupil and the most popular member of his class. It can be sincerely said that no man on the Campus is more popular than he. To try to enumerate his good qualities would be only to elaborate on his approved abilities. He has always found time to identify himself with Campus activities of the best sort, and has been a leader in them all. Lack of space prohibits an elaborate sketch which Max rightfully deserves. But we see from the list of his record that wherever he goes or whatever he does, he is doomed to be a leader among men.

Now surely we are not the only ones who hate to see Max leave, for it will be the cause of tearing down the "special wire" from his room to—well, otherwise and elsewhere known as Sweetbriar. Max leaves the old Alma Mater with a string of broken hearts as long as the "milky way," as well as an endless string of friends who will follow and wish him the very best wherever he goes.

CARTER NEWMAN BEALER

Washington, D. C.

Σ Υ; Graham-Lee Literary Society.

Carter came to us from the capital of this country, after having carried off the honors of Central High, way back in the dark days of the S. A. T. C.

Since his arrival he has been distinguished by his serious and studious manner and his remarkable ability in the realms of English Literature. We might almost say that he is a "teacher's pet," did we not know that his ability in all lines of scholastic endeavor have made him a veritable "shark," and the dean has procured a rubber stamp of the word "excellent," to be ready for his reports.

Carter has not decided what he wishes to do on leaving W. and L., but we may be assured that success will be his, because we know and admire his quiet, studious ways, and we appreciate his keen insight and ready mind.

Robert, as he is known to the faculty, and 'Cubby," as he is known to the students, is another product of old Lexington. But don't be too hard on him, for really he was born far from Lexington, in Chinkiang, China, of missionary parents, and is here in preparation for carrying the gospel back to the "celestial kingdom".

After finishing at the Lexington High School in 1918, "Cubby" displayed great perspicuity in coming to W. and L. He has been a real leader, not only leading his classes in scholastic average, but also rowing on the Championship Harry Lee Crew of 1921, holding a berth as Assistant Editor of the Ring-tum Phi, and taking an active part in the religious life of the Campus, being President of the Y. M. C. A. Promotion Force in his Senior year.

"Cubby's" great failing is a mania for collecting fossils, but it is rumored that his collection isn't restricted entirely to trilobites, but includes also several specimens of the fair sex.

CHARLES MILLER CAMPBELL

Irvine, Kentucky

"Charlie" is a true representative of the well-known Kentucky colonels. A gentleman, true and honest.

Back in the days of 1917, while he was roaming the streets of Irvine, he felt the old familiar phrase "I Hear You Calling Me," and it was none otber than the Generals calling. So he hied himself to Lexington that fall to become one of the selected few.

"Charlie" has pursued the course leading to an A.B., but he took the long way around and now is nearing the goal, which will later lead him to other victories that are waiting for him as he journeys through this life.

His winning personality has won for him a host of friends on the Campus, and will always win friends for him. Now, "Charlie", we have come to the parting of the ways, so always remember that your success is ours.

Guy Campbell

"Dean," as his many friends know him, came to us from Marion Institute with an A.B. from that place of learning already affixed to his name, and the two years that he has been with us have been made shorter because of our knowing him and because of our friendship with him.

Although he is known among the students and faculty as a hard, consistent student, he has had time for other things, for he was on the Football Squad of 1920, and also was out for baseball the entire season, where he was one of the most familiar figures on the fly-chasing squad.

With an A. B. from Marion Institute, an A. B. and a Certificate of Commerce from Washington and Lee, and his share, if not more than his share of hard, common sense, Guy will enter the business world, via South America, where his large number of friends expect great things of him.

After a very successful career at Emporia High School in his early life, Daughtrey decided to seek higher education in the mountains of Virginia at Washington and Lee. He seemed to hit here in a hurry, and unable to enter the S. A. T. C., he exerted this anxious energy upon his studies with marked success. His specialty was Commerce, and during his first two years the Commerce Library seemed to be, by adoption, his home. He took a new aspect of college life in his Junior year, however, and deciding to take part in other activities, was elected executive committeeman of his class. Time (as he) passed fast, though, and his Senior year found him active in Y. M. C. A. work, and finding a latent talent for journalistic work, he tried out for the Ring-tum Phi staff to which he was elected assistant editor.

While here, Daughtrey has acquired a large number of friends and is known by his loyalty (to the girls [?] or girl). He goes out into the world well equipped, and we see for him great possibilities in the future.

Alan Laurence Drury
Essex Junction, Vermont

Σ Φ E; Δ Ψ

"Let's go to the barracks, gang," and the old First Cavalry gallops off to Lee's dorm. "Al," or as he is better known on the Campus, "Zig" Drury hails from dear old Vermont. To date, we have been unable to locate Essex Junction, but we know it is some place near the Canadian border.

This chubby Puritan, after trying his luck at the University of Vermont and Norwich University, cleared for foreign parts, and the good ship DRURY dropped anchor on the W. and L. Campus in the Fall of 1920. Acclimating himself with little difficulty, he is back this year for the old degree. With an even break in Economics, "Al" should have no trouble in getting a life-long lease on the old "sheepskin." Should his name prove as immortal as did his person in a notable shaving campaign, the future can hold no terrors for "Zig." Although here for only two years, it is generally conceded that an irreparable breach will be made in our ranks when our Yankee pal answers the "Call of the North."

Louis Alexander Dunlap
Pulaski, Virginia

Σ Φ E; X Γ Θ; Secretary-Treasurer Senior Academic Class; Harry Lee Boat Club.

"Lap" is another of our boys from that great territory of Southwest Virginia. He had his early training at Dublin Institute, and in the Fall of 1917 he came to W. and L., and since then has been one of its most ardent and loyal students. He was to have finished with the Class of '21, but matters, not scholastic, intervened and so he was forced to transfer his allegiance to that of '22.

Dunlap has been a boy who did not confine his energies to any one branch of college activity, but has tried them all and acquitted himself with credit. And so he leaves college with that which we all should have, a knowledge of all sides of life and all that goes with it.

Every man has his specialty, and we think that "Lap's" is, above all else, a never-failing good humor and a better dependability. A cheerful comrade, a dependable friend, a companion for dark days, his going leaves a vacancy that will be hard to fill.

"Jerry" or "H. T." entered Washington and Lee in 1918. His first year showed him to be possessed of decided mentality and charm, for he straightway took on six of the most difficult courses in school and got away with it. In his second year he began an athletic career that was destined to be brilliant. He so actively identified himself with the Y. M. C. A. that he was elected its vice-president. Also he became one of the figures without which the affairs at the Doremus gym could hardly be successful.

His third year saw him captain of all track teams, winning his race in each one of the spring meets and winding up in stellar form at Washington where he finished first among a large field in the S. A. I. A. A. Championships. All this time he was continuing his exceptional mental work and was being elected into the various honorary societies listed above. A mighty fine all 'round man, and W. and L. will miss him when he enters the University of Pennsylvania to study medicine.

Lewis Murphey Henry

Behold! a man who is filled with the spirit of adventure. Really. we wonder that his middle name is not "Adventure." He is an example of that class of men who come to Washington and Lee for a year or two, and then try some other school, only to stay one year and then come back. Henry entered Washington and Lee in 1918, but this characteristic of his, referred to above, called him to the University of Arkansas, where we hear that there was a very strong attraction for him. However, realizing the error of his ways he re-entered Washington and Lee to obtain the much coveted degree. His spirit of adventure again showed itself this year, when he decided that he would go to Baltimore to see a football game. Just why he didn't get to Baltimore is a matter that we haven't yet learned.

Henry is a likable fellow, and everyone who knows him can't help but admire him. He greets you with a smile, and always has a good word for you. His admirable characteristics will no doubt insure his success in the world of medicine which he expects to enter when he leaves us.

When "Shorty" entered W. and L., there were only fifteen students on the roll—the rest were S. A. T. C.-ites. Two long years passed before he realized that A's and B's are sometimes given, and since that time he has attempted to appropriate all of them—his accomplishments show his success.

Besides this interest in his studies, Lexington, or a certain part at least, also "hath its charms" for him, but "mum's the word."

When he leaves W. and L., Best expects first to thrust what knowledge he has gained upon defenseless children with the aid of "hickory oil," then he expects to pursue graduate courses leading to the Doctor's Degree. Later he expects to settle down and raise—well— featherless chickens. Here's luck in all his undertakings.

"Brownie," as we all know him, entered Washington and Lee in 1917, and for three years was as well known and as well liked as any man in college. He left the classic halls of learning during the year 1920-'21, but returned last fall with the determination to carry a "sheepskin" away from Lexington in June, 1922, and as with all his undertakings, he succeeds.

There is scarcely one among us who has not heard the remark, "what a remarkable fellow," made in comment upon "Brownie." Although less fortunate than his classmates physically, he has not permitted the handicap to keep him from the front.

"Brownie" is noted for his keen wit, and many are those who have drunk of the bitter dregs of defeat before they learned not to engage this son of the "Old Dominion" in repartee. With his cheery disposition and his ability to transform darkness into sunshine we are confident that he will ever be successful in life as he has been in college.

"Red" entered W. and L. during the memorable S. A. T. C., and during the first two years at college established himself as a student. He returned his third year with a "Ford Racer" and a Biology Scholarship to fill the role of an assistant in Biology and show his presence at the surrounding girls' schools, incidentally attending a few classes. And now we find him ready for his A.B., and he has "made the ripples."

He is a lover of college sports, from hunting game in the wild to hunting fish in the pool room, besides worshipping Doremus Gymnasium during dance-tide.

Being an astute student of the sciences and coming from a family of distinguished physicians, we predict much success for "Red" in his chosen profession at Johns Hopkins, which institution he enters next year.

Frank Benjamin Hurt

Ferrum, Virginia

The subject of this sketch made his first appearance upon our Campus at the beginning of the present session. He decided to cast his lot with us as the proper place to win that coveted "sheepskin," after having spent a couple of years at Randolph-Macon. He came to us with the reputation of being a "curler", and a glance at his record will convince you that he well deserves the reputation he has won. To take a degree in three years is a rare accomplishment, yet Hurt has done it. Naturally, we expected big things from such a man and we find him up to our expectations.

High and exalting though his class-room work must appear, it is not chiefly as a student, but as a man, that he interests and affects us. He possesses those sterling qualities of character that make for success. All his interests are directed toward a freer and purer development of whatever is noblest in life. Into everything that attracts him he throws himself with feverish energy. With such a record to stand upon, we feel secure in our prophecy that in whatever profession he may decide to follow, we shall count him as a leader.

Behold! a man cometh from the Land of Flowers, possessed of the innate courtesy of a Spanish courtier, and resplendent "matadorial" abilities!

Louis has been on the staff of every publication and the Press Club since he pilgrimaged to the Shrine of the South in 1919, and perhaps it is because his habitat is only forty miles from the fabled Fountain of Youth that his literary style is ever new and captivatingly original. His felicitous pen whips and soothes the King's English into the ne plus ultra of versatile expression.

Louis finished the academic requirements in three sessions with an average of B. His aspirations for authorship are securely founded and should be productive of future additions to American Literature, should he ride this hobby to the gates of fame. Even should he seek after the mysteries of Blackstone and John Marshall, which he purposes to do next year, belike at Tucker Hall, his inimitable L. O. B. and admirable personality should charm the jury into easy susceptibility.

Moses Herman Levi

Manning, South Carolina

Φ E Π

It is usually customary to call a man by his shortest name, and if that is not short enough, to create a new name for him. Thus originated the name "Mose."

"Mose" hails from the Palmetto State. He satisfied all requirements from the Manning High School and entered the Citadel in the Fall of 1918. After having spent a year under the military routine of the Citadel, he decided that he would come to the University where he would have freedom and rest.

Good-natured "Mose" has as his particular hobby the telling of jokes, which mighty line pleases all students and "profs", likewise, as is shown by his studying little and making high marks. His winning ways and smiling countenance have won him a place in the student body which will long be remembered by his fellow students.

After earning his "sheepskin" he expects to become a member of that overcrowded profession known as Law. For his preparation, he is as yet undecided as to what school he will attend, but we hope it will be W. and L. and if he does, gentlemen, just dust off the Supreme Court Bench for him.

CHARLES PERRY LEVY, JR.

"Charlie" came into our midst in the Fall of 1917. As a Freshman he impressed everyone with his quietness and dignity. He came back in the following fall and became "star" member of the memorable S. A. T. C. One term of this routing was so strenuous that "Charlie" did not see fit to return to college after Christmas. Having completely reintegrated his strength, he returned in the Fall of 1919, with the determination to carry away the old "sheepskin," and in this he has succeeded.

Many are the friends that "Charlie" can boast of. To these friends who know him he is a conscientious student, a loyal friend, and a true gentleman. Many are they who will miss his dignified, courteous bearing on the Campus. We feel confident that he will be a notable success in journalism, his chosen profession.

JAMES PEMBERTON MADISON, JR.

Bastrop, Louisiana

"Bootey," as he is known on the Campus, is a most likable fellow, and his friends are numerous. He makes frequent visits to the "Student's Winter Resort"; he takes great interest in athletics, and whenever there is a football game he is there on the front line with the old W. and L. fight.

We must not overlook the fact that scholastically he stands very high and never fails to come out on the top. He is a hard worker and gets his reward.

He intends to study law at Tulane, and we all wish and believe that his work there will be as successful as his work at W. and L. has been. We hate to see you leave Madison, and we just wish that you would decide to take that Law course in Tucker Hall.

"Jim" blew in from Johns Hopkins in September, 1919, where he had finished two more or less successful, years. He was in service with the Hopkins S. A. T. C. at Camp Lee, Va. This service did him good, for it caused him to realize that there was more to the world than Baltimore.

"Jim" has had a very successful career at Washington and Lee. He is a good student, a good athlete, and a true friend. His friends are many and his admirers innumerable. A "man's man" always has friends, not in name only but friends that are real friends. And who can say that "Jim" is not a man?

He has always taken an interest in organizations or undertakings that were for the good of the school and the benefit of the Student Body. It would require much less space to mention his bad qualities and entirely too much to enumerate his good qualities. It is enough to say that he is a man, a friend and a gentleman in every sense of the word.

"Muss" came to Washington and Lee during the much derided S. A. T. C., and since that time has had only his long neck to worry over, as he is a student and epitome of good fellowship. Having served his time in the numerous English classes, he shows that his theory of education is to master his own tongue.

A lover of college sports, from shooting golf to giving the ladies a treat at the dances. Tutored since high school days as legal talent he will enter the Harvard Law School in the fall. We hate to lose him, but we know that he will be successful in his work and add many new friends to his list of old ones.

Another one of the Daddies of Washington and Lee is leaving us. Back in 1915, in the days before the war, this Carolina tarheel entered Lexington with a rush and has been on the jump ever since. An authority on Bugology and a connoisseur of the city's best society, Kilby finishes up his stay here in a blaze of glory. We will miss the quiet wisdom of his ways, his unassuming air, and his oratory, which often rises to those heights seldom reached by Webster, and is as hard to answer.

Not only was Kilby an aviator during the war, but to those who have had the pleasure of seeing him "strut the light fantastic" in old Doremus, it seems as if he still knows the art of soaring to dizzy heights. He is at home anywhere one sees him.

Kilby has made many friends at Washington and Lee. Quiet in nature and a diligent worker, he expects to pursue the study of medicine in another university next year. We can wish him nothing but success in his future work.

"Al," as he is familiarly known, not only to all W. and L., but to lovers of sport throughout the South and East, entered W. and L. long ago, 1914 to be exact. Who has not heard of the great game W. and L. gave Cornell in 1916, and the part "Al" played? The same thing happened that year in basketball when the strong team from W. Va. invaded Lexington, but they went down in defeat because "Al" was in the game.

In 1917, "Al" left school and made five attempts to enter the Service, being turned down each time. After this he turned to professional baseball, in his first game pitching the Braves to victory over the Giants, thus putting the Giants out of the pennant race.

"Al" has accomplished a great deal. His athletic ability made him a name and also made a name for W. and L. He coached Tufts College and Revere High School in 1918, and was on the Frankfort, Penna. and N. Y. Giants Professional football teams. W. and L. will miss him, but with one accord we wish him success and luck.

Charles Jennings Rice

Princeton, West Virginia

"I don't know, but I'll ask Miss Annie" are familiar words to the frequenters of the Library, and you can tell without looking that "C. J." is talking.

This sturdy West Virginian came from Princeton, West Virginia, carrying the scalps—we mean honors—of the high school of that city. He will receive the degree of B.A., in June, after which we expect and hope to see him return to get his LL.B. Then, we presume, he will return to enlighten the denizens of Princeton in the myriad paths of the Goddess of Justice.

We feel that his keen insight, his perseverance, and his modest manner will assure him a marked success in any field of endeavor that he may undertake.

Harry is one of our Georgia peaches, hailing from Macon, but we do not hold that against him. Always an ardent supporter of all kinds of athletics, he has unconsciously revealed the fact that he intends to replace Walter Camp before many years. For the benefit of those who do not believe this, we will refer to some of his samples in the Ring-tum Phi and the Mink.

As sidelines we cannot overlook his ability at golf, and stroking the billiard balls. However, he has never been known to bruise a billiard ball.

In the cool of the evening, Harry may be found in the Chemistry Lab., dodging the missiles of the fellow-workers. Harry is a hard worker, an exceptional student, and a true supporter of Washington and Lee. As he leaves us, we wish him the greatest success in his life work.

Samuel Emory Rogers
Summerton, South Carolina

Three years ago, Emory arrived from a little town in South Carolina named Summerton, and instantly set to work with the end in view of attaining an A.B. immediately. Not content with this feat he has succeeded in getting his name on the Honor Roll so often that even the faculty believe that he has a place reserved for him there. Together with these, Rogers has bucked the line in Greek 1 and 2 and emerged with "Toady's" scalp.

Upon leaving W. and L. Emory expects to give instruction to the youth of the promised land (of South Carolina), and his high character, earnestness of purpose, and noble ideals promise well for his success in this or any line of endeavor.

"Hust," or rather "Bus" or "Saint," was born in the great metropolis of Tazewell, Va., May 31, 1900. He graduated from the Tazewell High School in 1916, then spent a year at Culver Military Academy where he was a member of the "Black Horse Troop." In the Fall of 1917 "Saint" entered upon his college career at Washington and Lee. Among many other desirable traits, "Saint" possesses the one trait that few of us have, the ability to do what he wants to do when he wants to do it.

The Spring of 1920, "Saint" remained at home, but returned in the fall of that year, and to show he was in earnest made the Honor Roll the first term. He intends to study medicine at the University of Pennsylvania next year, and when he has completed his course there, he intends to leave for Africa as a medical missionary to Belgian Congo.

SAMUEL LOGAN SANDERSON

Red Springs, North Carolina

James J. White Scholarship, '20-'21.

In 1919, Sanderson enrolled at Washington and Lee as a Sophomore, having spent a year at Davidson College. His work preparatory for college was done in several schools, but chiefly at the Model High School, Richmond, Kentucky, and it was from this school that he graduated in 1918.

During his three years here Sanderson has, indeed, "dug hard," and as a reward, he leaves the school a very soundly educated man. Twice he carried off the James J. White Scholarship in Greek, and judging from his grades in that subject and from his assiduity in poring over a voluminous Greek dictionary, his knowledge of this ancient and classic language is of no shallow depth. In all his subjects, Sanderson has done well, and he bears the stamp of a scholar.

Those who know him find that beneath his quiet and somewhat shy manner, he has a ready supply of wit and fun. As he leaves W. and L. he carries with him the respect and good wishes of us all. We hear it intimated that the genius of a poet lies in him.

Graduating from Lexington High School into W. and L., and being practically reared on its ideals, "Dupey" leaves the University strictly a Washington and Lee product and one of whom we are justly very proud.

His activities have not been confined to any one line, but he has taken a position of prominence in all of them—athletics, religious activities, publications, and society—while his name has occupied a regular place on the Honor Roll for scholarship. His record as an all around man here as well as his popularity with the students assures his success as a man in any branch of life work which he chooses to enter. The best wishes of the whole Student Body and the expectation of great things from him go with him as he leaves Washington and Lee.

Walter hails from Clifton Forge, Va., just thirty miles on the other side of the mountain which rears itself to the north of Lexington. This much he admitted, and although we have never seen his native town, we feel certain that there the soil must indeed be fertile to have produced such a representative.

He has made quite an enviable name for himself on the Campus in several ways, chief among these being along the line of publications. By dint of his extraordinary ability as an artist he rose from the ranks to the Editorship of the Mink which was at that time still in the condition of chaos. By his efforts, the Mink has risen to such a point that it is now on a par with the best college humorous magazines, and has before it an even brighter future.

Walter shines not only in the journalistic world, however, as evidenced by his popularity on the Campus as well as with the fair sex. He carries with him the best wishes of his many friends and their confidence in his ability to make a mark for himself in the world.

WILLIAM SINKINS SPADY, JR.

Cape Charles, Virginia

That earthly paradise that is called by its natives the "Eastern Sho' " of Virginia, became, in 1898, the happy birthplace of "Shack" Spady. Growing up on a nutritious diet of fish, oysters, deviled crabs, and sweet potatoes, "Shack," in 1916, had become a likely young fellow, and he dropped over to Augusta Military Academy to get some new contacts with the world. He heard so many good things while there about Washington and Lee, that when he graduated in 1918 there was no other college for him. Meanwhile, the war became more serious, the S. A. T. C. was established, and "Shack," when he entered the University, was inducted into the military service and held down the place of a non-commissioned officer in what was known as the best S. A. T. C. in the South.

When the S. A. T. C. was abolished, many dropped away, but "Shack," true to his nature, stuck to the job, and this year he graduates with an honorable scholastic record and many friends. He is the quiet, dependable, sure kind of a man, whose going we most regret. We cannot just tell what he will do now, but he is known as the champion fisherman of the "Eastern Sho'," and we suspect that he will never be caught far away from the sound of the washing waves.

"Frickus" made his debut at W. and L. by entering as a Junior in the Academic School in 1920 after two successful years at Emory and Henry College.

He is the junior member of his class. His scholastic work has been of the highest quality; B's and A's never beyond his grasp. But this youth is far from a "grind." He has always found time to identify himself with the Campus activities of the best sort and has devoted much of his time and energy to push the things that actually count.

Among the multifarious activities in which he has participated are the Troubadours, crew, football, wrestling, and many others. As one of the stars of the wrestling team he came through the Season of 1921 with a record of having won every bout he entered. But the "bravest are the tenderest." He is likewise a musician of some ability, and few indeed are the "prom trotters" who can speak his name or think of him without a thrill.

A prediction for his future could but include the best that life has to offer. A proficient athlete, successful student, genial friend, a natural gentleman of clean habits, he is the kind of man whose going we must regret.

William Thomas Tillar came to Washington and Lee at the time the S. A. T. C. was organized, but his youth prevented him from enrolling in this branch of government service. His first year was like that of other Freshmen—taking freely of V. C. meetings and painting escapades. The desire to manage some of the University organizations had its germination during his second year, and time has rewarded him bountifully with managerial connections with the Ring-tum-Phi, baseball team, and the Troubadours. All of his time and energy, however, was not confined to these activities, for as a student he has been consistent and successful throughout his college career. As an entertainer of the fair sex who are imported during the dances, he has been equally as prominent as in his other activities; certainly, he has shown as much enthusiasm.

If conditions permit, he intends to spend a few years after graduation at work in foreign fields. We feel confident that whatever may be his chosen field of action he is well equipped for success.

Webb, the hardest working man in college, came to us from Randolph-Macon Academy in the Fall of 1918, and lost no time in taking his part in all school activities. Among his accomplishments are included work on nearly all the Campus publications, in the Y. M. C. A., and as manager of the football team. In spite of his numerous activities, he finds time to add his graceful presence to the dances where he runs the "wimmen" wild.

One often wonders how Wilfred finds time to study, but his academic record shows that he has no mean ability as a student.

Take it all in all, Webb is sincere, diligent, and an all around good man. His religious work here has been greatly varied and very valuable to us all. He is a friend in need, never failing to lend assistance in whatever manner possible wherever it is necessary. All these qualities insure his ability to make a success in future life.

Somebody said that Barrett was a woman hater, but that fellow just didn't know, because he is the kind of a man who doesn't believe in telling everything he knows. We know because we have been with him, and he knows "where they roost."

But don't be too quick to draw conclusions. The subject of this sketch never lets the fair sex detract from his studies, and he bids fair to be one of Virginia's leading physicians. He simply "knocks 'em cold" in all branches of science, and he "rides" physics, chemistry and biology as "crips."

We cannot help but predict a very bright future for a man with the personality, stability and unquestionable character this lad has. Barrett, we will soon hear from you in the medical world.

John decided back in 1916 that W. and L. should be his future alma mater, and we who have been his friends feel that we have profited by his decision. Among his many attainments we might mention—but why begin? Time and space are limited and our vocabulary is not very good. But we will say that he is no mean athlete, as a glance at his record will bear out. He must be full of wind, as he is noted as a cross country runner par excellence, and also is a member of the W. and L. "pep-suppliers," otherwise known as the band.

Child expects to put some of the engineering principles he has learned while here into practice, and we are assured of his success in that profession.

As soon as "Charlie" could walk, he began hunting bugs, birds, and rocks, and has continued to search for them, always collecting and adding to his collection of curiosities. A born naturalist, he is always on the trail. His hangout is the "Bugs" laboratory and the woods. Early recognized as a coming young naturalist, by his papers and articles in the bird magazines, he has continued broadening as he progressed.

Entering Davidson during the S. A. T. C., he saw his mistake, and as soon as the war was over, came to W. and L. Here he proceeded forthwith to annihilate "Bugs." As a result he has been assistant here for two years.

Interested in birds, he is always shooting them, but with the kodak. His excellence as a photographer has been recognized by his position on the Calyx for four years. He is a real naturalist and ornithologist, and next year he expects to continue his course at Cornell.

Reared within reach of the briny sea, "Larry" came to us, thin in stature, with tortoiseshell glasses, typical of the qualities of a student to which standard he has well measured. "Larry" did not hear the call of the various college activities at first, but busied himself in the pursuit of his education. He is a scientist by nature, and "A's", whether for his scholastic grade or for King Alcohol, meant nothing in his path of success.

The advantages of a slim frame are numerous, however, and in the terpsichorean arts he is a delight to the fairer sex. The ladies seem to think that this is his calling, but "Larry" thinks different, and we see great success in the chemical world for him.

In his Senior year he was elected executive committeeman of his class, and in recognition of his scholastic ability, also served as instructor in mathematics. He is well liked by his classmates and his college life will prove to be only the beginning of his success.

From the Memphis University Prep School, bearing honors and very little age, "Rudy" gracefully landed in his second alma mater. And even though he learned to love her greatly, his forceful ambition causes him to leave her three years after entry, which speaks highly for him.

Not all of his time was spent in search of knowledge, for "Rudy" is an all around fellow and liked by everyone. Gentle when it's time to be, but ready to take up for his rights when necessary; and when it comes to argument, well, he's a past master.

There's a gentle rumor that some fair maiden awaits him in the outside world, and if she chances to land him, she will have one prince of a fellow. We wish "Rudy" much success, and hate to have him leave us.

His activities are not at all limited to this one department, however. Throughout the whole Student Body he holds a number of friends that few are able to make, and when it was decided to rejuvenate the old Supply Store, Dewey was the man that was at once chosen to put it through. A man with Dewey's personality, character, and scientific ability is assured of success in life's pursuits, whether in love or science.

There is not a doubt in the minds of his friends that he will succeed, for he has always proved himself a consistent, persevering, hard worker. Success is waiting for him with wide open arms.

Theron quit us a while in his Sophomore year and held down a good position with the General Chemical Co. The call of the Campus and the advice of his superintendent were too strong, however, and he came back, much to the pleasure of his friends.

"Dick," as he is known by his numerous friends, began his college career at the University of Texas, but finding the Lone Star not entirely satisfactory, presented himself, a first class Sophomore at Wooster College. After these two years of wandering, he discovered in Washington and Lee his true Alma Mater and came to remain.

Although with us but two years, "Dick's" fine character and exceptional ability are recognized by all; the honors he has won are many. He has made a notable success in many fields; as a scholar, instructor, scientist, tennis player, or lover he is without a peer. Some say that he made one grade below A during his first year, but the writer is inclined to believe that this is a malicious rumor intended to tarnish his perfect record.

"Dick's" most signal success has been in the formation of friendships, and many of us are there who will ever remember his true, manly qualities, his cheerful disposition, and his ever willingness to aid a friend. We wish you well, "Dick."

"Abie" arrived in Lexington from Chattanooga one Fall day in 1918, and proceeded at once to make himself famous. Track was the means he chose, and by keeping at it until he won his monogram, he is now known as "Old Father Four-forty," himself. He also distinguished himself by braving all of "Sissy" Steven's courses. "Abie" is a math shark, too, and is therefore a buddy to "Liv" Smith. His sneaking admiration for the fair sex often entices him into attending the terpsichorean revels held in the Doremus gymnasium. One sometimes hears the voice of a sweet young thing say, "There's little Abie Williams, how he has grown," which proves that the admiration is mutual.

Speaking seriously, "Abie" is a good all around man, and few on the Campus can boast of more friends than he, and his cheerful smile and sunny disposition make him welcome wherever he goes. If a bridge is ever built across the mighty Mississippi, we expect to hear that "little Abie Williams" was the constructing engineer.

In the Fall of 1918 when Washington and Lee was made a student camp for the training of officers for the army, "Arby" appeared on the Campus and entered the "war college." Very soon, however, Kaiser Bill became frightened and the excellent military knowledge gained while "prepping" at Fishburne was not given a chance to mature.

His real college career began at the opening of the next session and has been marked by accomplishments in nearly every branch of college activities. His immense popularity was early proved and led to his election as President of the Sophomore Class, from which position he very ably assimilated the Freshman Class of '23. Besides rewards which come from popularity he has other honors which come only through ability. On the gridiron and dance-floor he has become well-nigh famous as a most consistent athlete. His "advice to the Lovelorn" and many formulae on "Vamping the Fair Sex" are unexcelled.

When he graduates we will miss the tall familiar figure that can always be seen strolling down the college lanes during the terpsichorean frivolities with a lady upon his arm. Whatever be his career after leaving college, his success is assured, for to use the mighty Shakespeare's own words, "to know him, is to love him."

Dayton Elvin Carter

Huntington, West Virginia

Φ K E; Σ; K B Φ; "13"; C. C.; Troubadours; President Finals, '22; Executive Committee, '19-'20.

Student, musician, actor (or rather actress), fancy dancer, and all-around good fellow, "Runt" has packed into his four college years more achievements for himself and his fellow students than falls to the lot of most of us. His wide experience in observing the vagaries and eccentricities of the female of the species has cast him for the leading feminine roles in the Troubadour productions, and closer association with the ladies has developed a latent talent for eccentric dancing, first revealed on the stage, and resulting in his being elected as President of the Finals, 1922, the highest social honor in school.

His popularity is further attested by the fact that he is a member of every social club on the Campus, but his social proclivities do not, as in many cases, spell defeat to his grades, for these latter are of a kind to give rise to an enviable pride. It is a source of regret that injuries received in prep school prevented his former athletic ability from bolstering up W. and L. teams, but his loyal support will be missed in this branch of activities, as in every other, when he leaves in June.

JAMES ABRAM CRANFORD, JR.

Jacksonville, Florida

Σ A E; Π A N; K B Φ; A K Ψ; C. C.; President A K Ψ; Commerce Scholarship, 1921-'22.

History relates that Jimmie was born in Jacksonville on January 9, 1901; that he received his preparatory work at the Jacksonville University School, and that he followed the footsteps of his brother by coming to Lexington in the Fall of 1918. With the exception of the last two terms of his Freshman year he has been here ever since.

However, mere history cannot tell the whole story. When Jimmie came back in 1919 he knew what he wanted and didn't stop until he got it. Now he can look back on his college career and justly say that he has received a well-rounded education which has been entirely successful, for he has high "B" and "A" for his grades. Yet he is a student without being a bookworm, for he has found time to make many friends and to enter many Campus activities, doing well whatever he does. We hope that in Florida as a business man Jimmie will find as great and even greater success than he has found here.

JOHN CLAY HOOVER

Webster Springs, West Virginia

After sojourning at the University of West Virginia during the S. A. T. C., this promising "Mountaineer" heard the call of a greater institution beyond the Alleghenies, and in January, 1919, he arrived in Lexington to start moulding his career.

But this aspiring West Virginian has not limited himself to text-books by any means. He has found time to take up other activities and has won places for himself on the Ring-tum Phi and Mink staffs, besides being a regular participant at the meetings of the Graham-Lee Literary Society.

In the words of "the Campus spellbinder," Hoover's ambition is to secure "the key to power," and we venture to predict the gift of oratory will be his. J. C. will re-enter W. V. U. next fall to take up law, which, he confidently tells us, he expects to make his life profession.

We can but say as a final word that the "Little Mountain State" can hold naught but a brilliant future for this noble son of hers, and as he leaves us in June, both student and professor will say with one accord, "Our loss is West Virginia's gain."

WILLIAM FREDERICK LIVINGSTON
Clinton, Missouri

ΣAE; AKΨ; Culver Club.

Fred was a Christmas present to Washington and Lee from the University of Missouri, and he arrived intact in January, 1920. In this case it was not the Missourian who had to be shown, for when his new friends strolled into McCrum's that cold evening, Fred was entirely screened by a heavy smoke coming from a huge cigar. However, his face is now quite familiar to the Campus, especially to the Commerce students.

He evidently liked the school, for he has remained with us ever since, and the feeling is quite mutual, for he numbers his friends by his acquaintances. He has been a good student and a supporter of all University activities, but he has nevertheless found ample time to be with the boys for play as well as work.

We regret that he leaves us now, for he has shown us all that he is a true gentleman and a good sport.

RALPH STUART MCLEMORE
Wise, Virginia

Handball Champion, Singles and Doubles, '20-'21, '21-'22; CALYX Staff, '21-'22.

"Mac" came to us from Southwest Virginia, Wise County, to be exact, with the idea of adding to the glorious procession of W. and L. alumni there. While here, his idea has been well carried out. He is getting his B. S. degree in Commerce, and doing it in three years. Besides, he was champion handball artist last year in both singles and doubles.

"Mac" expects to take up accounting eventually, and will probably choose Columbia as the place for some graduate work. But various other things may be included in the post graduate course, as he is never satisfied with just the ordinary amount of work. No, girls, we wouldn't whisper the name of the one he likes best, but then how are we to know?

Richard David Maben, Jr.
Blackstone, Virginia

K Σ; Π; A N; A K Ψ; C. C.; President Senior Class; Varsity Baseball.

"Snake," one of the social lions of the Senior Class, received some of his education at Annapolis, Uncle Sam's Navy School. He is a "devil with the women," and when near a good-looking little "tickle-brain" he is not exactly rational. In spite of the Volstead Act, "Snake" finds that he can be carried to ethereal heights easily, as the presence of the fair sex is sufficient to intoxicate him.

"Snake" is a good student and has also worked hard on the baseball diamond where he has pitched some good games. His popularity on the Campus was demonstrated by his election to the Presidency of the Senior Class, a position which he has occupied with dignity.

Here we have a man one is proud to have as a friend, and his good nature and industry forecast a successful future for him.

John West Melton
Coushatta, Louisiana

After knocking 'em cold at L. S. U., during the term, '17-'18, John decided to seek learning in foreign fields, so we first hear of him dropping off the old C. &. O. in September, 1918. But John learned to like picturesque old Lexington so well that he was not satisfied with spending only three years with us. Accordingly, he so arranged and proportioned his work as to be able to be here four years.

Upon completing his work here, John expects to go to Columbia and there specialize in accounting. After such a varied and thorough preparation, and considering his general make-up, we can only predict and wish for him an extremely brilliant and successful future. During his stay here, John has made a host of staunch friends.

Charles Henry Miller

Anniston, Alabama

Π K A; Π A N; K B Φ; C. C.; "13"; Harry Lee Boat Crew, '18-'19; Secretary-Treasurer Harry Lee Boat Club, '18-'19; Harry Lee Second Crew, '17-'18; Historian Senior Class, '22.

Howard College claimed him for a session, but our hero's ambition knew no bounds—he came to Washington and Lee in 1917, and his conquering march has not yet closed! Charles may be little, but everybody knows him, and we can truly say that he occupies an enviable place in our Campus life. His unfailing good humor and cheerful disposition have made him many friends, and his wide range of activities, social, athletic, and scholastic, stamp him as a successful college man.

Charles plans to "buck" the business world after obtaining his Commerce diploma. His first plan will probably be to reorganize Anniston according to his own ideas. But whatever his work, the best wishes of a host of friends go with him.

William Josiah Leake Patton

Wytheville, Virginia

A K Ψ; Troubadours, '19-'20-'21-'22; Taylor Scholarship, '20

"Joe" came to us in the Fall of 1917. His attractive personality and consistent cheerfulness soon made him one of the most popular men on the Campus. He has since that time persistently advanced himself by his musical talents and numerous other ingenious capabilities until he has become one of the best known men of the student body. It may be truthfully said that "to know him is to like him."

When "Joe" leaves W. and L., the Troubadours will have lost a man whose services have been invaluable; the Commerce School will lack one of its best scholars, and the University will miss one of its most popular and gifted men. We wish him the great success which we know awaits him in the business and financial world.

HENRY BURWELL ROBINSON

Blackstone, Virginia

K A; Π A N; A K Ψ; Executive Committeeman Senior Academic.

Henry Burwell, better known to his friends as "Robbie", reared in the shadow of Blackstone Military Academy, first thought that he, too, wanted to be "Mama's Soldier Boy," and after completing his early schooling at Blackstone High School, adorned the brass buttons at V. P. I. Here he became active on the gridiron, and his second year entered the "dry-land 'garb' unit."

The attraction of military life gradually smouldered, however, and he saw visions of the business world filled with opportunities, and in the Fall of '19, entered Washington and Lee to prepare himself for this work. He has specialized in Commerce, and his marks show that he has done this with marked success.

In his Senior year he was elected executive committeeman of his class, but even this does not measure his popularity among his classmates. "Robbie" has been a hard-working student and goes forth into the world well equipped to knock down the many obstacles in the path of success.

WYLIE WILLIAMSON TAYLOR

Huntington, West Virginia

A T Ω; Σ; C. C.; Manager Basketball, '21-'22; Troubadours, '18-'19.

"Pop," as he is best known, came to Washington and Lee in 1917. Since that time he has become one of the most popular men on the Campus. He first became distinguished by the remarkable way in which he moved his feet over the floor of the old Doremus Gymnasium, and with a keen desire to know all the women he has likewise become well known throughout all Virginia.

Not being of Phi Beta Kappa material, he soon turned from this Freshman desire and became engrossed with all his heart and soul into that which meant the most to him—his fraternity. Never has he once turned from this high ideal, and when "Pop" leaves in June, not only the whole University but his fraternity will suffer a great loss.

We all hope he will be as successful in the future as he has been at college, and judging from his progressiveness and ability to make friends, we are fully assured he will be. In future years we can look back with great pleasure and laugh heartily once more at the tales he used to tell. "Pop" is loved by all who know him.

Robert Wilbur Yates

Raleigh, North Carolina

Σ X; Π Δ Λ; Property Manager Troubadours, '21-'22.

After a year at North Carolina State, Wilbur decided that the best place to complete his education was W. and L., which we think was a very wise decision on his part. He came to us with the expectation of carrying away two degrees. We all know his ability along these lines would make it easily obtainable, but since he decided on only one degree, we often wonder why the change. Some say he decided to specialize in Business Finance, instead, but we are inclined to think that this specialization was in "transportation" by way of the Hollins Limited.

Besides being a diligent student, he has always found time to indulge in college life. His pleasing personality and cheerful smile have won a host of friends for him, and his congeniality is exemplified by his genial disposition and bigness of heart. The more we know him the more we admire his sterling qualities.

Our best wishes go with him in his future career, and what we lose by his splendid character, personality, and ability to succeed, the business world will gain.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

Washington and Lee Student Body Government

FOR the general maintenance of good order and gentlemanly conduct the University depends upon the voluntary application of the honor system, enforced by public opinion among the students."

An honor system has been in force at Washington and Lee so long that it has become a tradition, and a precious tradition indeed to the heart of any Washington and Lee man. It assumes that every Washington and Lee student is a gentleman and treats him as such. Only rarely has this trust been found to be misplaced. In the few cases in which it has, the student body, without the intervention of the faculty in any way, has immediately rid itself of that member who has lacked in gentlemanly perspective, through the action of its elected representatives. Of course, the student may have a public trial before the student body, if he so desires, but this happens no oftener than once or twice in a lifetime.

No professor remains in his classroom during an examination. No student worries about his books when he leaves them outside the classroom, or even when he leaves them lying promiscuously about the Campus. In the gymnasium, no student thinks of locking his locker containing his watch and purse when he is taking a shower or exercise. Things are just not done that way. That's all.

In addition, the word of the student is as good as his bond. For example the professor immediately accepts the excuses that his students give for absence. No endorsement is needed for his checks. Even the town merchants take this into consideration in their dealings with students.

The records of the University are left open to public inspection, and no one disturbs them. The offices of the administrators are never locked. No one considers it necessary.

Yes, the Washington and Lee student is a gentleman, or he would have no place at Washington and Lee.

John 17: 21

"That they may be one; as Thou, Father, art in me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that Thou hast sent me."

GENERAL SECRETARY

E. B. Shultz

A BIRD'S-EYE view of the work of the Washington and Lee University Young Men's Christian Association can probably best be given by presenting separately the work of each committee:

Bible Study Committee; F. J. Daughtrey, Chairman

Eighteen Bible discussion groups in dormitory and fraternity houses were started in October, and nine finished a ten weeks' series of discussions the first week in December. Approximately ninety men, with an average attendance of seventy-five, were enrolled in the groups which completed the series. The groups were led by mature students and younger faculty members who prepared for the task in a normal training class under the leadership of Prof. W. M. Brown.

Missions Committee; S. H. St. Clair, Chairman

Taking up the discussion group plan after Christmas, this Committee organized seven groups for the discussion of the difficult European economic and social conditions and America's responsibility. Two association meetings were planned by this Committee with mission emphasis; and two more will be held during the Spring term. Sixteen men represented Washington and Lee at the State Student Volunteer Convention at Charlottesville, February 17th to 19th. Dr. Aggrey, a native African, was invited to Lexington by this delegation, and spoke at a large church meeting in Lexington and later at the Sunday afternoon social, March 5th.

Social Committee; D. R. Snively, Chairman

Three very fine concerts were offered by this committee to students and citizens of Lexington during the winter. Approximately a thousand men attended the three concerts. A very enjoyable feature of the association program was the Sunday afternoon socials held each Sunday afternoon during the winter term.

Religious Meetings Committee; R. D. Smith, Chairman

One of the strongest features of the Association program has been its religious meetings held every other Thursday night. The pastors of Lexington and members of the faculty contributed to these meetings, and certain other speakers of prominence such as Dr. Seerly on Sex Hygiene, Dr. H. C. Gossard on Social and Economic Conditions of Europe, Dr. French, President of Emory and Henry College, Mr. William Knowles Cooper, General Secretary of the Washington, D. C., Y. M. C. A., Judge Jackson of Roanoke, Dr. Crowe of Wytheville, and Dr. Blain of Hangchow, China. Some of these speakers coming under the auspices of the association were able to make certain other useful contributions to the University, such as Dr. Seerley, and Dr. Seeley K. Tompkins, who spoke at University assemblies, and Dr. Gossard, who spoke of his European experiences to several classes in the School of Commerce.

Social Service Committee; B. H. Hampton and H. T. Garard, Chairmen

This committee was active in sending out deputation teams in the early part of the year, but this work was interrupted by the resignation of Mr. B. H. Hampton, who found it necessary to leave school. Mr. Garard followed Mr. Hampton in this office, and in addition to some deputation work, arranged a regular program for the visitation of sick students, and Sunday meetings for the county jail. This committee did effective work in giving an opportunity for students to express their religious life in service for others.

Promotion Force; R. M. Bear, President

All Christian men on the campus who desired to organize for a co-operative effort to extend the Kingdom of Christ on the Campus were invited to become members of this organization. About seventy men enrolled. Meetings were held every other Thursday night during the year, alternating with the general religious meetings, with an average attendance of about forty. This organization purposed to carry to the whole student body the various messages of the association program under the direction of the executive council. In order to do this as effectively as possible, the two requirements for membership, in addition to the desire to serve, were: regular attendance upon meetings, and daily devotions. While this organization did not accomplish all that was hoped, it did effective work in connection with several important features of association work.

Conclusion:

Several important features of the year's work did not fall under the direction of any of the above committees, but must be mentioned separately to give anything like a complete view.

Rev. Melvin E. Trotter, assisted by Homer Hammontree and Howard Hermanson, came to our Campus for his second Evangelistic campaign. He was tremendously effective in presenting the Christian life to the students and commanded both the respect and attention of the entire University. He has permanently benefited the moral and religious life of our Campus. The Executive Council of the Y. M. C. A. elected Mr. Garland Alexander, student leader of this campaign.

Mr. Lester, the Treasurer of the association, engineered the campaign for voluntary financial support of the work from the students and faculty, receiving about $1,700. The total budget was approximately $6,000, $1,600 of this balance being received from miscellaneous sources such as lyceum numbers and Handbook advertisements. The remaining $2,750 was generously appropriated by the Board of Trustees of the University toward the salary of the general secretary in recognition of the contribution of the association to the University.

The Student Friendship Fund for the relief of European students was presented by the association to the student body authorities, and with their active co-operation, $300 was contributed to this worthy cause. As an additional contribution to this fund, our association lent the services of its general secretary for a month during which he visited colleges of West Virginia and Maryland.

Practically every department of the work has benefited again this year from the active co-operation of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. They have contributed to the comfort and attractiveness of the recreation room, have furnished dainties to the sick in the hospital, have enlisted the ladies' organizations of the various churches in serving delightful banquets once a month to the Promotion Force, have served at all social occasions in the Y. M. C. A. quarters, and have co-operated in every conceivable way to make our work more attractive.

It is the hope of those responsible for the leadership of the Young Men's Christian Association that it may continue to be a wholesome influence in the moral, social, and religious life of the University as it has been since 1867 when founded with the inspiring co-operation of Robert E. Lee.

Debating

WITH the large increase of the student body during the past few years, debating has taken on a different and more important aspect at Washington and Lee. Once merely a side line for those with spare time, debating contestants go through a grueling selection comparable to that in Varsity Athletics. Work and more work from the date of preliminaries until the contest, under stringent and unceasing competition has marked this year's debating.

Washington and Lee has already taken part in the regular triangular debate with Johns Hopkins and the University of North Carolina. The subject was: "Resolved, That the federal government should own and operate the coal mines." W. and L. upheld the affirmative against North Carolina at Baltimore and the negative against Johns Hopkins at Chapel Hill. North Carolina had the negative against Johns Hopkins at Lexington. It so happened that the negative side won in every case, each university represented winning once and losing once.

J. N. Thomas and J. G. Ragsdale won over North Carolina by the unanimous vote of the judges. W. and L. had the negative side in this case. E. W. Poindexter and S. A. Glickstein debated with all the powers of a Cicero against Johns Hopkins, but could not overcome the handicap under which the affirmative side placed them. They lost by a four-to-one decision. F. B. Waters and D. H. Lindsay were the alternates for Washington and Lee.

Another debate is being planned by the Debating Council to take place late in the spring. It is possible that this debate will be with George Washington, though it has not been definitely decided as this copy goes to press.

Washington and Lee will also be represented in the State Oratorical Contest to come in the spring. Last year, Fitz Flournoy won over all contestants in this field, and it is hoped that W. and L. will be as successful again.

In addition to renewed activity in Intercollegiate Debating, the literary societies have taken on a greater interest. A few years ago it became necessary to combine the two literary societies into one, but this year they have again been separated. The competition between the two societies has been spirited, and we believe, foreshadows a new era in Campus Debating.

Washington and Lee Publications

THE enormous advance of Washington and Lee during the past decade is admirably reflected in her student body publications. A few years ago, her newspaper, her magazine, and her Annual, were more or less of the small college type, but now we feel that we can reasonably compare these publications with those of the largest universities in the country.

To make the most of this development, a new system of control for this important branch of student body activities is being planned. Perhaps before this comes from the press, this system will already have been adopted. The proposed plan is in the hands of the Executive Committee, and inasmuch as all the publications are backing it, we feel sure that some good will come from it.

This plan calls for a Publication Board composed of the various editors and managers, including the President and Manager of the Press Club, the editors or managers of the previous year who may be in school, several alumni and faculty members. Such a board has been organized this year, and although it has not been able to accomplish much, working as it has without any official sanction and striving to get publications on a sound business basis, it has nevertheless accomplished much. At least, it has made a beginning, and it has furnished this year's editors and managers a means of getting together and thrashing out matters that have come up from time to time.

Under the leadership of Editor Ellis and Manager Holt, the Ring-tum Phi has assumed the role of bi-weekly instead of a weekly as it had been until this year. The test has proved undoubtedly the great advantage of this change in the policy of our newspaper. In spite of the fact that this was the first time that such a thing has been done at Washington and Lee, anyone who has been reading the "Phi" will admit that it has succeeded admirably well. With the experience laid up this year, it may reasonably be expected that the Washington and Lee paper will be larger and better next year.

During the unusually depressed conditions of the war period, it was found necessary to discontinue the old Southern Collegian. This was a severe blow to those of us who had been familiar with it in previous years. In looking back over the old magazines in the Library, we find even yet a lot of "good stuff" handed down from the time of such editors as Thomas Nelson Page, the famous short story writer.

However, in 1920 a movement was advanced for the re-establishment of the Southern Collegian, with some few changes necessary to enable it to fit into the new idea of college life. The result was the establishment of The Mink—the College Comic. Though only two years old, this humorous magazine already ranks with the best of them. Numbers of students and initiated outsiders read its pages with pleasure.

The Press Club occupies a peculiar position at Washington and Lee. Although established and conducted by the University, it is under the management of students. Its purpose is to provide better advertising for Washington and Lee in the newspapers throughout the country. We feel that this activity is really helping in making for a bigger and better Washington and Lee.

With the exception of the Y. M. C. A. Handbook, put out by the W. and L. Y. M. C. A., and intended for the use and assistance of new men, the only other Campus publication is the CALYX. We do not intend to judge it. You will be able to do this better than we. What we have tried to do is to put out a better CALYX than last year or even any other year, and at the same time come out even financially. We have kept everything so far as possible on a firm financial basis, and have tried to build up a book of memories and at the same time pay a tribute to the school from which we Seniors are just graduating.

It is perhaps true that more students take an active interest in the work of the publications than in any other Campus activity with the possible exception of athletics. Over a hundred positions this year have been filled in making up the various staffs. So far as possible the best man wins; the man who is capable and at the same time who is willing to work.

Taken all in all, everything seems to point to an even greater field of activity and service to the University in the various publications of the student body.

Review Mlle. Gaby

THE Troubadours offered for their third annual production, Mlle. Gaby; an original musical comedy with the book by J. Lidell Peck, music by John A. Graham, and lyrics by Carl E. L. Gill and Stuart Moore. It was without question the best show produced by the Troubadours. The lines were clever, the music splendid, the dancing and choruses good, and the costuming attractive. In all, it was a well-rounded performance surpassing the average college play and comparable to a legitimate professional production.

Dayton Carter as Mlle. Gaby, and Charles Wright as Clarence divided the stellar roles. Carter's grace and personality in a feminine role together with his histrionic talents have left little to be expected. A brilliant career is predicted for him on the stage should he decide to follow that profession. Charles Wright as the "Oh, I say old chappie" type of Englishman, slow-witted, be-monocled, etc., made a better Britisher than the many impersonators we have been so fortunate as to have seen. John Morrison as Johnny Lee made the most of his role; as the juvenile hero he assayed his part as a seasoned thespian. Albert Gifford put dialect and mannerisms into his Jewish characterization of Abe the Producer. His comedy helped enliven the entire performance. J. C. Roberts made an attractive Duchess. With the ability displayed by him in this show, we should like to see him again in future productions. H. A. Dawson was well cast as the Duke—a sort of like-father-like-son combination. He, too, is a find in which there are great possibilities. Wirt Donnelly executed very satisfactorily the part of Mrs. Mag. O'B. Lee (formerly of the circus).

The music was truly a feature. Perhaps the best numbers were "My True Love," "Gaby," "May Moon," and "Man, Man, Man."

The Orchestra under the direction of W. W. Manley, Jr. contributed materially to the success of the performance.

The chorus was unusually graceful and their dances were well executed. Here we have a splendid contribution for Flo Zeigfield's next "Follies."

The play took place at a reception given by Mrs. Lee for the Duke and Dutchess of Wiltshire and their son, Clarence. In honor of the occasion, Mlle. Gaby, an international musical comedy star was to have appeared, but shortly before the reception, Mrs. Lee received a telegram to the effect that it was impossible for the madamoiselle to appear. Abie Changefield, a house guest and former associate of Mrs. Lee when she was Mag O'Brien of the circus suggested the substitution of the attractive French maid for the famous actress. Mrs. Lee had her gorgeously costumed, and when the guests arrived, she was announced as Mlle. Gaby. Both Clarence, the English slow-wit, and Johnny Lee, son of the hostess, fell in love with this Mlle. Gaby. She was enamored of Johnny but showed kind attentions to Clarence. This caused an estrangement. Abie engaged this French maid to star in his "Follies," and she became the toast of Broadway. Following a reconciliation of Johnny and Mlle. Gaby, when she told him she was but a poor housemaid, Maggie and Abe announced their marriage and everything ended happily.

THE selection of a new head coach of athletics, the appointment of a graduate manager and Washington and Lee's action in affiliating with the recently formed Southern Conference, all during the past year, may truly be regarded as significant of the beginning of a new era in athletics for the University.

Following the resignation of W. C. Raftery last December, a committee made up from members of the faculty, alumni, and students was immediately formed to select a new head coach of athletics. As a result of their action, "Jimmy" DeHart, famous Pitt star and last season assistant head coach of the sensational University of Georgia eleven, was named. His selection met with frank approval on the campus and he was secured under a one-year contract to take up his duties here next September. In March, Lindsay L. Moore, for the last two years captain and left tackle on the Generals' eleven, was named by the same committee to be assistant head coach for the coming year.

R. A. ("Dick") Smith, Class of 1912, began his work in the capacity of Graduate Manager of Athletics at Washington and Lee last September, and his accomplishments during the year just ended have more than justified his appointment. His experience as head coach of athletics at Fishburne Military School for several years enabled him to return eminently qualified to assume his duties here, the need for a graduate manager having long been felt.

Washington and Lee has formally joined the Southern Conference, and will in the future conduct all athletic contests and policies under the rules of this association. The one-year rule, the non-migratory rule, and strict enforcement of the four-year playing limit rule, are a few of its outstanding characteristics. This step subsequently marked the resumption of our suspended athletic relations with the University of Virginia and the University of North Carolina during the year.

Collectively and individually, the above realizations lend a distinct impetus to athletics at Washington and Lee, the limitation of which may not with certainty be established but which undeniably is indicative of a broader, more discerning, and more properly controlled policy in the years to come.

Weight, 200; Height, 6 ft. 2 in.

An adequate sketch of Lindsay's work in a few lines is to achieve the impossible. Last season was his fourth year on the Varsity and his second consecutive year as Captain of the Generals. Rated by various authorities and sports writers as one of the best tackles in the country, Moore led his Fighting Generals in every game of the season. Remarkably fast for a large man, he was a certain tackler and never failed to get his man. He outplayed every tackle against him all year; his work against Centre, West Virginia, and Rutgers being sensational. He repeatedly downed "Bo" McMillin for losses behind the line, in the Centre game, following which Coach Charlie Moran of that institution pronounced him "one of the greatest tackles I have ever seen." His loss this year by graduation will be almost irreparable.

MATTOX, Captain-elect, half-back.
Weight, 163; Height, 5 feet 8¼ inches.

"Monk," in addition to being the most accurate heaver of forward passes ever seen on Wilson Field, was a consistent groundgainer, equally good at either skirting the ends or plugging the line, and one of the hardest tacklers on the team. His dependable work in the backfield during the season gained for him the captaincy of the General's 1922 machine, which will make his fourth year on the Varsity.

HERNDON, End.
Weight, 175; Height, 5 feet 11 inches.

"Joe" was a stalwart man on either the offense or the defense and played hard all through. At getting down under punts or smearing the plays of opponents, he was always in evidence from the start of the game. He held down his "wing" position with credit throughout the season. His loss next season will be keenly felt.

POTTS, Tackle.
Weight, 195; Height, 6 feet.

"Daddy," after waiting a whole year to become eligible, got that way in September and stayed there all year. He was a veritable tower of strength on the defense and could fathom his opponents' plays in time to smear them before they started. His work in the line was reliable and consistent and he made a fit running mate for Captain Moore.

RANGELEY, Guard.

Weight, 197; Height, 6 feet 3 inches.

"Doc" had it on them all when it came to the business of height, and also played his first year on the Varsity after waiting a year to become eligible. A hard scrapper, Rangeley was in the thick of every play from the first blow of the whistle, and was a guard of no mean ability. He was fast for a big man and could get down under punts from the line. "Doc" will not return next year.

COLLINS, Center.

After a year spent at Yale, "Pat" returned and took his old place in the pivotal position again, his abilities not a whit lessened by his absence. Collins played a smash-up game until injuries forced him out of the line-up just before the Centre game. He never made a bad pass, broke up everything in his territory, and was a stone wall on the defense. His work in both the Rutgers and West Virginia games was far beyond the average.

TERRY, Center.

When Collins was injured just before the Centre game, "Charlie" stepped into his place and played one of the most remarkable games against the praying Colonels ever seen in Louisville. Mud three inches deep is a handicap under any conditions, but Terry made but one bad pass during the whole game. He finished the season against Hopkins, and again demonstrated that he was a center to be relied on in the mud or on the dry gridiron.

VOGEL, Guard.

Weight, 185; height, 5 feet 11 inches.

"George," although handicapped during part of the season by an injured knee, played a steady game all season at his hole and was particularly strong on the defense. It was his second year on the Varsity, and he will probably return again next season. Few plays ever ran through Vogel more than once, then the attack was shifted.

WALTERS, Guard.

Weight, 185; Height, 5 feet 10½ inches.

"Punk" as a nickname did not coincide with Walters as a guard. Although playing his first year on the Varsity, he alternated with Vogel at left guard and showed a world of stuff in action. Against Rutgers, his work was unusual, and despite an injury, he played the whole game. Walters was a scrapper from the first toot of the whistle, and his presence will be a decided advantage next year.

BEMIS, End.

Weight, 165; Height, 5 feet 11 inches.

"Tom" will graduate, but the fame of his "goode righte toe" will remain for years to come. For it was Bemis, in the last few minutes of the play in the annual clash with the V. P. I. at Lynchburg, who skilfully drop-kicked from the 25-yard line the Generals to a 3-to-0 victory, gaining for himself a niche in the Hall of Fame. Tom played a great game all the year and will return again next season for his third year on the Varsity.

CAMERON, Fullback.

Weight, 168; Height, 5 feet 10½ inches.

Whenever a yard, five yards, or ten yards were needed, "Eddie" was given the ball and usually got there with it. Cameron played a steady, consistent game all season and could back up a line as well as he could tear one open. Against Hopkins in the final clash of the season, Cameron played sensationally, while his work in the V. P. I., Centre and West Virginia games was also noteworthy. His return next season will materially strengthen the backfield.

McDONALD, Fullback.

Weight, 168; Height, 6 feet.

"Wahoo," playing his third year on the Varsity, alternated with Cameron and was one of the hardest-hitting men on the field. Mac could rip open a hole with a vim that set the opposition back every time he carried the ball; he was unusually strong on the defense and could always be relied upon behind the line. Against Centre, his work showed up especially well. He will return next year.

TUCKER, Halfback.

Weight, 140; Height, 5 feet 7 inches.

One of the lightest men on the team, but the speediest and one of the most spectacular, "Tuck" finished his second season on the Varsity last fall. In running through a broken field or in returning punts, in hitting the line or in circling the ends, Tucker was always good for a gain and was one of the most valuable men on the team. His loss will be keenly felt next season. His work stood out prominently in every game on the schedule.

FREW, Quarterback.

Weight, 155; Height, 5 feet 11 inches.

The task of piloting the Generals through the season fell to "Student," and his work in running the team was beyond criticism. Frew also did all the punting and could carry the ball for substantial gains whenever he took it. His generalship stood the White and Blue in good stead more than once during the season, he was a steady player and his return next year will assure the Generals of a veteran quarterback.

ARBOGAST, End.

Weight, 165; Height, 6 feet 1½ inches.

"Hop" was sure to give a good account of himself no matter what sort of opposition he was up against. He was one of the hardest playing men on the team, he could snag passes from any angle, and he successfully smeared any plays directed over his end. In the West Virginia game as well as the Centre game, Arbogast's runs after he had intercepted passes were spectacular. It is probable that "Hop" will return next season.

THOMAS, End.

Weight, 155; Height, 5 feet 9 inches.

Although he did not win his letter his first year out, "Kay" showed that he was an end of no mean ability during the season, and could always get his man, spill the interference, and check the play. In every game in which he played, Thomas could be relied on to be either on the bottom or the top of the pile, and his ability to get down under punts indicated his speed.

WINGO, Quarterback.

Weight, 155; Height, 5 feet 10 inches.

"Doug" was a valuable man whether running the team, running interference, or running around his opponents. He was one of the strongest men on the team on the defense, and his headwork during the season was no small factor in the General's successes. He took Frew's place in most of the games, and with his return next season the White and Blue will be assured of a capable brace of pilots.

LEAKE, End.

Weight, 155; Height, 5 feet 10½ inches.

"Johnny" sustained a broken shoulder in the V. P. I. game which hindered him the remainder of the season, but he was an end of merit beyond doubt. No matter how big or how little they were, Leake stopped them when they tried to skirt his end of the line, and on the offense he was equally as good in getting his man. His speed was a valuable asset.

Resumé

WHILE not remarkably successful from the mere standpoint of scores, the eleven which represented Washington and Lee during the 1921 season, displayed at times flashes of brilliancy that compared favorably with the best of former seasons. In defeating one of the strongest elevens ever put on the field by Virginia Polytechnic Institute, as well as Johns Hopkins, champions of Maryland, the Fighting Generals easily presented the strongest claim of any team to the mythical South Atlantic Championship.

Though the strength of the team lay undoubtedly in its defense, the efficient work of the individual men in the backfield on the offense compares favorably with any of the season's opponents. The main feature of the Generals' offense and that on which they relied mostly was an aerial attack, developed to a high degree with Mattox doing the passing, and brilliantly executed at all times.

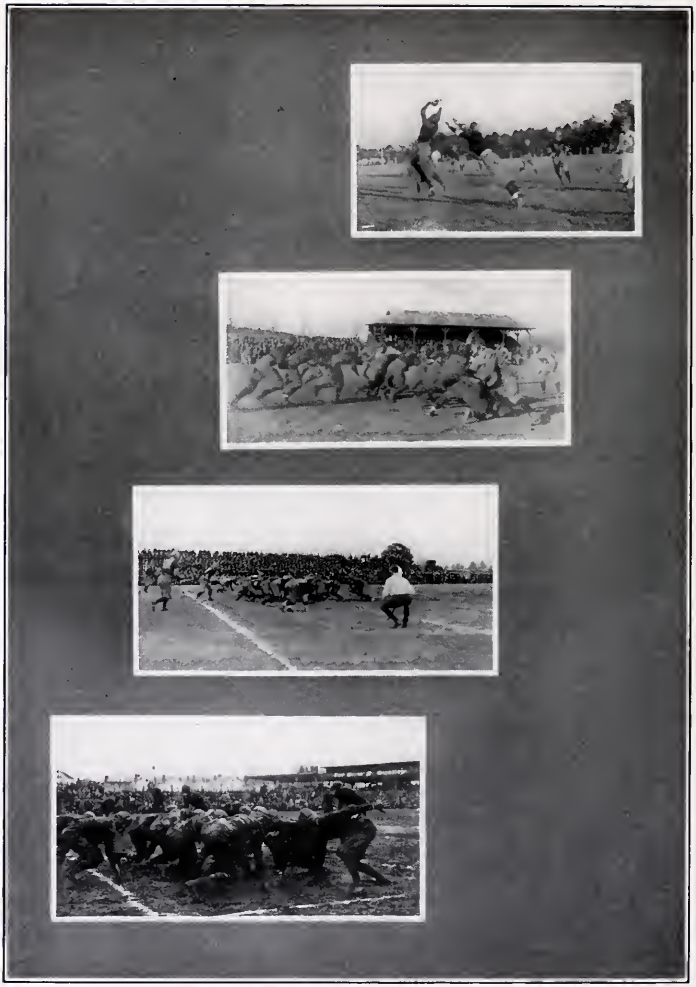
The outstanding star of the season for the White and Blue was easily Lindsay Moore, for two years Captain of the Fighting Generals; for two years unanimous choice for All-South Atlantic tackle, and chosen by several authorities as tackle on the All-American. As a mainstay on the defense, "Shifty's" work was brilliant, while on the offense, his speed and ability to get down under punts was a spectacular feature of every game of the season. His loss will be keenly felt next year, though he will return as assistant coach.

Nine monogram men returned to the University from the 1920 Varsity, as well as most of the first string scrubs, but in addition to these, the new material among the squad of sixty men which turned out for practice the third week in September looked unusually promising, including in it such men as "Daddy" Potts, All-Southern tackle from Clemson, "Doc" Rangeley, giant All-South Atlantic tackle from V. P. I., Walters from Northwestern, and Wingo from Marion Institute.

The first two games of the season were with Randolph-Macon and Emory and Henry on October 1st and 8th. Relying solely on straight football, the Generals easily plowed through the two lighter teams, and in both games practically three teams were used, rolling up a 41-to-0 score against the Yellowjackets and a 28-to-0 victory over Emory and Henry.

The Generals clashed with Rutgers in the first big game of the season on October 15th at New Brunswick. Displaying a bewildering attack and an impregnable defense, Washington and Lee showed a fighting aggressiveness coupled with an aerial attack that baffled the heavier Scarlet team for three-fourths of the game. The generals put across two touchdowns, both on long passes from Mattox to Tucker and Thomas, but failed to kick goal after the first counter. Rutgers used thirty-one men in an attempt to stop the Blue machine, and finally in the last quarter, after ten replacements, ran in the giant Gardner, 225-pound fullback, and by using him as a ram they battered their way through the Generals for a touchdown. With a series of long passes and more battering by Gardner they slipped across another just before the whistle blew, the heartbreaking result being a 14 to 13 defeat.

The game with Morris Harvey was a listless affair, the Generals with ease rolling up 33 points to their opponents' 7. In the last few minutes of play and with the third team on the field, Rezzanico threw a pretty pass to Shannon who ran forty yards for Morris Harvey's lone touchdown.



The annual classic with Virginia Tech on October 29th proved to be one of the hardest fought games of the South Atlantic season, with the teams see-sawing up and down the field from the Generals' 27-yard line to the Gobblers' 15-yard marker for three-quarters of the game, both teams using every kind of offense. Finally, with six minutes to go, Bemis hooked a long pass from Mattox and placed the ball on the 16-yard line. Three attempts to gain, failed through the line and Bemis was called on again. He responded with a perfect field goal, giving the Generals the pleasant end of a 3-to-0 score. During the game, W. and L. made eight first downs with a total of 207 yards, while the Gobblers amassed 171 yards from nine first downs.

On November 5th the West Virginia Mountaineers completely spilled the dope in Charleston by amassing 28 points to Washington and Lee's 7. In this game, the Generals showed a drive and punch that at times enabled them to wade through the Mountaineers easily. A recovered fumble by West Virginia in the first quarter resulted in a touchdown, giving the Mountaineers a start, and with comparative ease they pushed across two more in the third quarter. In the final period, the Generals braced and put across their lone tally on a long pass from Mattox to Thomas.

Roanoke fell an easy victim to the White and Blue, succumbing with a 41 to 0 score, the Generals using straight football and applying the steam-roller with telling effect. The outcome of the game was never in doubt from the start.

On November 19th, the Fighting Generals again invaded the South to meet the Centre College Wonder Eleven, recent victors over Harvard and Auburn. There, on a rain-soaked field, in spite of the fact that Centre ran up 25 points to a zero for W. and L., the Generals, by stopping the whirlwind attack of the Praying Colonels and holding them for downs six times within their own five-yard line, against the rushes of the giant "Red" Roberts, gained the respect and admiration of every man on the opposing team as well as the crowd of 12,000 spectators that packed the stands. But in spite of their superb efforts, the Generals could not break up the brilliant aerial attack by McMillin, who, with Roberts and James, was playing his last home game.

Returning from Louisville, Monday, the Blue team took to the road again Wednesday, invading Baltimore to meet Johns Hopkins, Thanksgiving Day. The game was played in the pouring rain and the Fighting Generals' line again stood them in good stead by stopping the rushes of the powerful visitors' backfield when they were on the verge of scoring. In the final quarter, due to the terrific line-plunging of Mattox and Cameron and finally to two long passes from Mattox to Arbogast, the Generals put across the only touchdown of the game, the final score being 7 to 0. The entire Blue and White eleven played sensational football in spite of the mud-soaked field, Captain Moore, Mattox, and Cameron being the individual stars.

During the past season, against "Bo" McMillin and his Praying Colonels, against the heavier Rutgers machine at New Brunswick, in every game of the year, Washington and Lee time and again demonstrated against odds that the title of "Fighting Generals" was not and has not been a misnomer. The entire team and substitutes worked together in a manner which won praise from all who saw them play, while in the person of Captain Lindsay Moore, Washington and Lee had a leader who was admittedly one of the greatest linemen in the country.

From Head Coach Raftery on down to the last substitute, the 1921 Generals are best characterized by the term "Fighting Generals."

HINES, Captain, Forward

"Frenchy" led the Generals through the season and was one of the most valuable men on the team. His passing, shooting and all-around floorwork was no small factor in the Blue and White quint's string of victories. A veteran of three seasons and with an intimate knowledge of the game, he was well fitted to captain the five during the season.

SCHNEIDER, Guard. Captain-elect, 1923

A broken shoulder sustained in practice held "Red" out of several of the more important contests until the Virginia and North Carolina games, but his work featured every game he was in. Under the basket or on the floor, "Red" could handle them as they came and at the close of the season he was chosen to lead the 1923 team.

CAMERON, Guard

"Eddie" was a hard fighter and played a consistent game throughout the season. Few opposing forwards managed to get by him and make their baskets, his close guarding being a feature in every game. With Schneider, the Generals had a pair of guards ranking favorably with any in the South, both of them excellent passers.

THOMAS, Guard

Playing his third year with the Varsity, "Jimmie" was the fastest man on the team and gave his opponents something to worry about all the time. He was a good shot, was always in the game and could jump with the biggest of them. His work in the Kentucky game was one of the best exhibitions of floorwork ever seen in Doremus Gymnasium.

LAKE, Forward

After outshooting everything in West Virginia scholastic circles, Nelson came to W. & L. and proved his ability to cage baskets from any spot on the floor in every game he played. His ability to ring up field goals was a big factor in every victory during the season and the fact that he will have three more years to play is significant.

ARBOGAST, Guard

"Hop" participated in most of the games during the season and was a valuable man at any stage of a contest. With three seasons of experience behind him, he demonstrated during the year that he could go in and make trouble for any opposing team in preventing them from dropping in field goals and in handling the ball himself.

GLENN, Center

After having had to wait a year to become eligible, "Red" took the pivotal position and proved himself one of the best shots on the team. At securing the tip-off, "Red" encountered few superiors, and his all-around work in all of the games made him a most valuable asset to the five.

McDONALD, Guard

"Mac" could jump at center almost as well as he could hold down a guard position, and as a result, played in several games at this position. Steady in the pinches and a sure passer, he went through his third season on the Varsity at all times able to put up a hard battle for the opponents.

Resumé

TERMINATING the season with a second well-earned victory over the University of North Carolina (Champions of the South for 1922) on their home floor at Raleigh, on March 2d, the Generals succeeded in annexing eleven of the fourteen games on their schedule by substantial scores which served to indicate the strength of the Varsity during the year. The University of Kentucky, West Virginia, and Virginia games were the only three losses of the season, at least two of which may be fairly said to have been a more or less direct result of the crippled condition of the Blue and White quintet at the time of the contests. While these three games comprised a trio of the most important ones on the schedule, their loss in no way impaired the success of the Generals' five, as their later victories of important games, especially of the Southern Champions in the final game of the season, adequately demonstrated the fact that Washington and Lee possessed one of the strongest teams in the South for 1922.

Captain Hines, Thomas, McDonald, Arbogast, Cameron, Mattox, Snively, Sturm, Hall, and Wiltshire from last year's team or squad, were all back, while "Red" Schneider and "Red" Glenn, both ineligible last season and both experienced men, were eligible for positions on the Varsity this year. The failure of Captain Stephens to return to college for the second term, left his position open. Among the new men, Lake, star forward with the Charleston High School team last year, and Kelly who had played with Catholic University, were the most promising looking in the first few scrimmages.

After three weeks of practice, the first game of the season against Emory and Henry College resulted in an easy 38 to 21 win for the Generals. Schneider was unable to start the first game, owing to illness contracted during vacation, but the Blue and White combination, consisting of Captain Hines and Lake, forwards; Glenn, center; and Cameron and Thomas, guards, proved too much for the visitors, and the game was never in doubt. Hampden-Sidney came next on January 17th, and with Schneider in the line-up, Washington and Lee romped off with a 48 to 18 win, showing a marked improvement in all-around play over the opening contest. Shortly after this game, Schneider received a broken shoulder in practice which seriously crippled the team, but despite this handicap, Thomas took his place, and Elon College was handed a severe drubbing, the final score being 63 to 19. Lake caged ten field goals in a beautiful exhibition of shooting.

With the same combination as was used against Elon, St. John's was defeated 49 to 11 at Lexington on January 27th, Captain Hines and Lake again leading in the scoring, the former with ten field goals and Lake with eleven. On January 31st, the University of Tennessee, touted as having one of the strongest teams in recent years, drew the short end of a 40 to 11 score, although they brought to Lexington the strongest team the Generals had met with. Consistent passing and flashy teamwork all the way, coupled with Lake's, Hines', and Glenn's ability to find the baskets was responsible for their defeat.

With Schneider out of the game, Glenn partially ill, and on a strange floor, West Virginia defeated the Blue and White quint at Huntington on February 3d by a 34 to 17 score. The whole team was admittedly off on shooting, but they gave the West Virginians a closer battle than the score would indicate. The game with the University of Kentucky, Champions of the South for 1921, came next at Lexington on February 7th, and was the hardest game of the whole season to lose. Kentucky barely succeeded in nosing out a crippled Washington and Lee team by a 21 to 20 score, the extra point coming from a foul shot in the closing minutes of play. Neither Schneider nor Captain Hines took part in the game, the latter being on the sick list.

In the next game of the season, the Generals journeyed to Lynchburg and defeated their old rivals, V. P. I., by a 38 to 32 score. Both Lake and Snively played star games, while the remainder of the team was in fine shape as well.

In what was expected to be the hardest game of the year, the Generals took the measure of the University of North Carolina at Lexington on February 18th by a 38 to 25 score. The Tarheels had a great team, but the Blue and White was primed for the game, and after one of the prettiest games ever witnessed in Doremus Gym, succeeded in winning out.

After a lapse of six years, the Generals met Virginia at Lynchburg on February 25th and lost to the Orange and Blue, 35 to 25. The Generals were slated by comparative scores to win handily, and the loss is still a matter of conjecture in many sources.

In the two final games of the season, the Generals went to Raleigh for return games with State, and the University of North Carolina, winning both of them. State was played on March 1st, Washington and Lee nosing them out 32 to 31 in a fast game before a large crowd. On the next night, the University of North Carolina, coming directly from Atlanta after having won the Southern Championship for 1922 and determined to avenge their previous defeat at the hands of the Generals, again went down to a 39 to 36 defeat by Raftery's charges. The North Carolinians started out with a rush and ran up a ten-point lead before the Generals found themselves, but in the second half, Washington and Lee ran away with them and proved their assertion of having one of the best basketball teams in the South.

During the season, the Generals amassed a total of 553 points as against their opponents' total of 322 in the fourteen games played. They formed a fighting team, never giving in until the final gun had been fired, and their accomplishments were well worth the confidence placed in them and the support given them by the entire student body during the year. "Red" Schneider, who played a consistent game at right guard until he was injured and after his recovery, was chosen captain of the 1923 team by the monogram wearers on March 7th, and will lead practically the same team next season, with the possible exceptions of Captain Hines, and Glenn.

Resumé

Between sixty and seventy-five men answered Coach Raftery's initial call for candidates for the 1921 baseball team on March 5th, the first day weather conditions permitted outside practice on Wilson Field. Battery candidates had previously been working-out daily in the field house for two weeks and were ready for more strenuous practice in the open. The Generals were particularly fortunate in having eight members of the 1920 Varsity return; among them Captain Hisle, Monk Mattox, Curley Burke, Sammy Raines, Matt Henderson, "Ty" Cobb, Walker, and McCallum. These men formed a nucleus of veterans around which to build apparently a most formidable aggregation. Material for the hurling staff was much in evidence, with Walker and McCallum, the two stars of the previous season, and Maben, McDonald and Riddick, from the 1920 scrubs, as well as Patrick, a promising new man from Castle Heights Military School. Other new men who showed up well in early practices were Hancock, Ward, Switzer, and Harrelson.

The schedule as arranged by Manager J. L. Paterson included twenty-four games: fifteen to be played at home and nine abroad, the first contest coming on March 31st against Penn State. The Generals met with some effective opposition, and before a large crowd composed mainly of fair Easter visitors, lost to the visitors by an 18-to-9 score. Neither Maben, Patrick, Walker, nor McCallum could check the opportune slugging of the Pennsylvanians, who garnered sixteen safeties.

The second game of the season against the University of North Carolina resulted in a 5-to-2 win for the Tarheels, Llewellyn, the visitors' twirler, being in fine form and allowing but four hits. Errors by the Generals proved costly at critical moments, though Patrick went the full route for Washington and Lee and hurled a good game. In the third game of the season, the Generals came out of their temporary slump and defeated the University of Florida at Lexington 9 to 4; mainly by hitting when hits counted. Captain Hisle, Cobb, and Frew played sensational ball, Hisle driving in two of the General's runs in the seventh by a long two-bagger. McCallum allowed the visitors but seven well-separated bingles.

Carnegie Tech showed the effects of Hans Wagner's coaching in the fourth game by whitewashing the Generals 12 to 0 in a slugfest that took three pitchers to stop. Washington and Lee played errorless ball, but the visitors had their batting optics peeled all the way, and refused to be stopped until Maben went in in the sixth and checked them. The game was marred by intermittent showers. On April 12th, William and Mary brought one of the classiest teams ever seen in action on Wilson Field, and with Marshall, their pitching ace, hurling airtight ball, the Generals suffered their fourth defeat by a score of 5 to 1. Maben pitched a steady game, but Washington and Lee was only saved from a shut-out when Captain Hisle scored on a squeeze play.

Washington College was defeated in the next game on April 14th by a score of 7 to 3, and it looked as if the Generals had lost their jinx. Washington and Lee grabbed the lead in the first inning and never lost it, Patrick holding the visitors to six scattered hits and pitching an otherwise tight game. Hancock's home-run clout in the seventh was a feature of the game. On April 16th, the Generals romped all around Johns Hopkins in Baltimore and won by a score of 18 to 7 in the first game off the home lot.

Overcoming a 7 to 3 lead, the Blue and White team came from behind and staged a battling rally in the eighth inning which netted seven tallies. Home runs by Captain Hisle and Raines were features of the game.

In the best-played game of the entire season, V. P. I. defeated the Generals 1 to 0 at Lexington on April 19th, Harvey, the visitor's twirler, allowing but one hit until the ninth inning. McCallum also hurled a pretty game, giving only five bingles and receiving admirable support from his team-mates. Auburn came out of the South on April 20th for a two-game series with the Generals and went on their way rejoicing with both scalps annexed onto their belts by scores of 4 to 0 and 6 to 3, respectively. Patrick only allowed four hits in the first game, but they came at opportune times, while in the second game, the Generals could not hit when they needed to.

Oglethorpe was defeated in easy fashion in the next encounter by a score of 12 to 3, the result of the game never being in doubt, long drives by Frew and Hisle being important factors in the game, as well as the hurling of McCallum. Georgia Tech completed her Northern invasion by defeating the Generals in both games of a two-game series on April 29th and 30th by scores of 2 to 0 and 6 to 3. Both games were well played throughout, the first being a pitchers' duel between Thompson and McCallum, the former having slightly the best of the breaks. Guilford College was easily disposed of by the Generals by a score of 18 to 3 in the next game on May 3d.

The Southern trip came next, and on the first game away from home, the Generals were badly defeated by V. P. I., 10 to 1 at Roanoke. Tech garnered fifteen hits, while W. & L.'s eight hits counted for only one run. With Hancock, Raines, and Cobb all out of the line-up, the invasion of the South proved somewhat disastrous as regards games won, for the Generals lost five and captured one. Mercer, University of Georgia, and Georgia Tech were met in the order named, but the first game with Georgia was the only one which resulted in a victory. Mercer took both games, 5 to 3 and 5 to 4. The first Georgia game was a 2-to-1 win for Washington and Lee, but the Southerners came back and took the second by a 5-to-4 count. Georgia Tech scored two victories, 4 to 1 and 8 to 4.

The Generals returned and administered two defeats to Randolph-Macon by scores of 6 to 0 and 3 to 1. In the second game, Patrick hurled a one-hit, one-run game in a great exhibition in which he was offered steady support. During the last two days of Finals, the Generals lost the closing games of the season to Vanderbilt, the visitors capturing the first contest 2 to 1.

The Generals played in hard luck during most of the season and while they often out-hit and outplayed their opponents, the "breaks" always seemed to go to the other side. McCallum, pitching ace of the staff, was elected captain for 1922 at the close of the year.

The 1921 track team went through a very successful outdoor season in spite of the fact that the loss of Captain "Birdie" Robbins from the 1920 team was very keenly felt.

The season opened very auspiciously when Washington and Lee took every first place and easily defeated Maryland State, 101 to 24. Thomas, by winning the 100, 220, and broad jump, and Captain Blair Price by taking both the high and low hurdles, scored more points than the entire Maryland team.

The annual dual track meet with V. P. I. resulted in a defeat by the score of 77⅓ to 48⅔. For the Generals, Captain Price was again the star performer with an easy victory in both the high and low hurdles. Garard's spectacular two-mile run was also a feature. Silverstein broke the University record in the discus by a throw of 112 feet, 11 inches.

In the third dual meet of the season, the White and Blue athletes met the University of Richmond in the Richmond stadium and again won, 87 to 39, taking every first place with the exception of the broad jump and the pole-vault, the latter ending in a tie. Captain Price duplicated his past performances in the hurdles, while Smith featured by winning the mile and taking third in the two-mile.

Due to lack of funds in the athletic association treasury only eight men represented Washington and Lee in the Annual South Atlantic meet in Washington on the Georgetown Field, but these few took fifth place among the ten schools entered, with Georgetown first. Price won the 120-yard high hurdles; Garard took first in the two-mile; Gibbons took fourth in the pole-vault; and Thomas, fifth in the 220, totaling thirteen points for the Generals.

Though the loss of five monogram men to the 1922 team—Price, hurdles; Cover, javelin thrower;

Caldwell, 880; Gibbons, pole vault; and Garard, two-mile, was keenly felt, the other six letter-men—Thomas, dashes; Williams, 440; Silverstein and Potts, weights; Smith, distances, and Carr, high jump, returned to the University. In addition to these, the showing made in the indoor season by the other members of the 1921 squad as well as several new men presages a successful outdoor season for 1922.

Indoor evenrs were confined to the single events run-off between the halves of basketball games and to the Annual Indoor Meet in Baltimore. Among the new men who look promising, are Norman and Ward in the pole-vault and high jump, also the latter in the hurdles, Humphries in the quarter and half, and Simmons in the hurdles. Williams of the 1912 team tied the indoor record for the quarter between the halves of one of the basketball games. Both Norman and Ward broke the indoor high jump record by making 5 feet, 10¼ inches.

Viewed as a whole, the Generals' 1921 season was one of the most successful in several years past. Besides presenting a well-balanced team, the individual work was far above the average. In Captain Price, Washington and Lee had a high and low hurdler who ranked favorably with any in this section and one who placed in every meet of the year, either first, second or third. Garard, in the distance events, won every race in which he entered all season, and captured the South Atlantic two-mile event at Washington, against a star field of runners. His work conclusively showed that in the distance he compared with any other runner in the South, his time in several events being new records for the local courses. Silverstein and Smith were also individual stars, the former having broken the University record for heaving the discus with a throw of 112 feet, 11 inches.

South-Atlantic Championship Team

AFTER a remarkable exhibition of distance running, Washington and Lee's 1921 Cross-Country team captured the annual meet at Baltimore on Thanksgiving Day to decide the South Atlantic Championship, winning out by a safe margin over the University of Virginia, Johns Hopkins, and Maryland State. Despite a drizzling rain which fell intermittently during the whole of the race making the course heavier than usual, the Blue and White harriers set the pace for their opponents over most of the six-mile course and finished strongly with a substantial lead. Pass, Swope, Smith, Heiskell, and Howard all ran great races and finished well up in front. As a result of this victory, should Washington and Lee capture one more meet, permanent possession of the South Atlantic trophy cup will be assured, and from the performances of the past season, such a victory seems more than probable next year.

The opening of the season found an abundance of distance material, competition for places on the team being especially keen. The first few time trials brought out some star performers, and several records for the local course were lowered. Captain Garard and Smith, both letter-men from last season, showed excellent form as did several new men. The first meet of the season with V. P. I. at Blacksburg resulted in a loss for the Blue and White team, Captain Garard and Balliet both being unable to finish on account of cramps, which seriously interfered with Washington and Lee's chances.

The Generals easily won from Maryland State at Washington in the second meet, the result of the race never being in doubt. Pass, Balliet, and Smith all ran great races and showed their ability to negotiate the distance.

During the season, the running of Captain Garard, Smith, and Howard gave evidence of consistent ability far above the average. Monograms were awarded to Captain Garard, Howard, Pass, Swope, and Heiskell, at the close of the season. The loss by graduation of Captain Harold Garard will be keenly felt next season, his work during the previous year having been one of the biggest factors in the Generals' success. To Coach Forrest Fletcher should be attributed no small measure of the credit due the Blue and White harriers in winning the South Atlantic Championship, his careful coaching and instruction producing self-evident results during the season.

Resumé Wrestling

WASHINGTON AND LEE entered her second season of intercollegiate wrestling with an abundance of material, both new and old, from which to select a formidable team. Practically all the grapplers who had represented the Blue and White during the 1921 season, with the exceptions of Hampton and Ogden, returned to college this year, and the early practices showed that Coach Brett would have a task before him in making his choices for a representative aggregation of matmen. With Captain Asbury, Manager Sutherland, Potts, Gotten, and Cothran all from last year's team, and several new men of promising calibre, practice was started before the Christmas holidays.

The first meet of the season came on January 14th at Lexington with the University of Virginia opposing the Generals. Our line-up in the various weights included Ellis, 115; Gotten, 125; Gay, 135; Sutherland, 145; P. Hatcher, 158; Captain Asbury, 175; and Potts in the unlimited class. The visitors were reputed as having an experienced team, but Washington and Lee won easily by a 25 to 10 score. Captain Asbury, Potts, Sutherland, Hatcher, and Ellis all won by falls over their men in some clever work, while the Orange and Blue matmen secured two falls.

In the next meet of the season, V.P.I., by dint of some superhuman work, managed to nose out a one-point win over the Generals, the final score being 13 to 12. It was one of the most exciting meets ever staged in Lexington, all the matches being closely contested. Potts, after a wonderful exhibition of strength and cleverness, won the decision over his man, as did Sutherland, Gotten and Captain Asbury. Not a single fall was scored in the whole meet, Washington and Lee showing throughout the effects of good coaching and a knowledge of the fine points. Cothran replaced Gay in the 135-pound class in this meet and wrestled in this weight the remainder of the year.

The third meet of the year on February 4th against the Navy at Annapolis resulted in a 28 to 5 loss for the Generals. Ellis was the only man on the team to win his match, which he did by securing a fall after a few minutes of fast work. Potts lost on a decision, while the other matches all were falls for the Middies. The Generals put up a game fight, but faced more experienced men. West Virginia defeated the Blue and White matmen at Morgantown on February 17th by a 20 to 3 score. Potts won a decision for Washington and Lee in the unlimited class, but the Mountaineers gained decisions in all the other matches. There were no falls registered, indicating the closeness of the meet.

Trinity proved to be an easy victim on February 27th in the final meet of the year, the Generals winning 24 to 5. Captain Asbury, Sutherland, and Potts all won by falls, while Ellis, Gotten, and Graves secured decisions against their men. A feature of the match was the work of Graves, who replaced Cothran in the 135-pound class and won his first intercollegiate match. The entire team showed a vast improvement over the earlier part of the season, and had the schedule been more complete, would no doubt have established a much better record in additional meets.

The work of Captain Asbury, Sutherland, Potts, and Ellis stood out prominently during the year, Sutherland being thrown for the first time in two years in the Navy meet. R. C. Potts was chosen Captain of the 1923 team at the close of the season, while monograms were awarded Captain R. P. Asbury, Manager F. A. Sutherland, T. J. Ellis, G. L. Cothran, P. Hatcher, Captain-elect R. C. Potts and N. Gotten.

Resumé Boxing

For the first time in the history of the University, Washington and Lee supported an organized intercollegiate boxing team during the winter months, and while only two meets were held against other colleges, this particular branch of sport has received its baptism, and plans are already under way for a larger number of matches next year.

Coach Ernest Brett put out a call for candidates for the team shortly before the Christmas holidays, and after vacation, work was started in the gymnasium daily in preparation for the initial meet with Virginia at Charlottesville. In view of the fact that this was the first time the sport had been put on an organized basis, fewer candidates than was hoped for reported to Coach Brett, but some promising material was found in Hock, Ottenberg, Hamilton, Tilson, and others. Harry Hock was chosen as manager and was later elected captain.

The first meet with Virginia resulted in an easy victory for them, since Washington and Lee won the decision in but one match, Tilson defeating his man. Captain Hock was unable to make the trip which seriously interfered with the Generals' chances. The Blue and White team put up some nervy scraps, but was at a disadvantage against the more experienced Virginia team.

A return meet at Lexington resulted in a reversal of the tables, Washington and Lee winning one out of two matches. A feature of the match was "Curley" Burke's k. o. of Virginia's captain, Burke having substituted for Hamilton, who was ill. Captain Hock also won his bout after a bitter scrap, as did Tilson, Thompson, and Ottenberg, all staging some classy exhibitions of the gentle art.

Swimming Team

WHILE it had been hoped that a more extensive schedule would be completed, Washington and Lee's mermen took part in but one intercollegiate swimming meet during the 1922 season, the Navy proving its familiarity with the briny deep by decisively defeating the Generals at Annapolis in February by a score of 48 to 9. Although the final score was substantially in favor of the Middies, the Blue and White plungers gamely contested every event on the programme, and afforded some interesting competition throughout the whole meet.

Walters, for Washington and Lee, took second place in the plunge after extending the Navy's intercollegiate champion to the limit in this event. Captain Greiner, Humphreys, Rushton, Mercke, and Jenkins also showed up well during the meet, while Smith and Hock did well in the diving. The annual swimming exhibition was staged in Doremus Gymnasium on Friday, March 10th, during which several existing school records were lowered in the various events.

Coach Twombly brought out some excellent material during the season and assisted the team materially by his work with them before and after the holidays. A more comprehensive schedule of meets with other colleges is contemplated for 1923, since the Generals will return practically all the members of this year's team.

Tennis Resumé

WINNING three matches, tying one, and losing one, the 1921 Tennis Team made a record of which they may be proud. The Northern trip was greatly handicapped by rain, the matches with Johns Hopkins, Navy, and George Washington being called off. The other match on the trip with the University of Maryland was won with ease, 6 to 0. The home matches resulted in winning from University of North Carolina, tying V. P. I., and losing to George Washington.

The playing of Captain Burch throughout the season was the most sensational and consistent ever seen at Washington and Lee. He is rated as one of the best men in the South in this department of sports.

With Captain Toad Snively and George Mason returning and much promising new material being in school, this year's team should live up to the record made in the past two years.

Before one of the largest galleries witnessing a crew race in several years, the Harry Lees' first crew won from the Albert Sidneys in the forty-fourth annual race held on the last day of Finals. From the crack of the starter's pistol, the two shells kept their sharp noses together over most of the course, the Harry Lees finally crossing under the wire a scant three feet winner. Both crews used a long, sweeping stroke which sent them leaping through the waters of North River to one of the fastest finishes in several years past. The second crew lost to the Albert Sidneys by two lengths in the second race of the afternoon.

Interest in crew racing during the entire season was at a higher pitch than usual, and several intercollegiate races are being contemplated for the near future, practically all of the members of the Harry Lee crew, and the Albert Sidney as well, returning to college this year.

While the Albert Sidney first crew lost to the Harry Lees in the deciding race, their second crew won easily from the Reds by a safe margin of two lengths. From the start of the race, both first crews appeared evenly matched, and covered most of the course with no difference between the sharp prows of the long shells, but by an unlooked-for burst of speed, the Harry Lees flashed across the wire only three feet ahead of the Albert Sidneys. The Blues' second crew showed their stern to the Harry Lees' seconds in a most convincing fashion, and were never headed during the whole of the race, crossing the wire in a strong finish.

Both crews practiced daily during the spring for the Finals race, and their form showed the result of diligent effort in the shells. Membership in both during the year was larger than for several years past and it is altogether possible that meets with other colleges may be arranged for next year.

Head Coach William C. Raftery

COACH "Bill" Raftery, as the head coach is known around the Campus, carries with him as he leaves this year the highest respect and admiration of the Washington and Lee student body. During his stay here he has been regarded as a coach of the very highest type in all three major sports.

Raftery hails from Yonkers, N. Y., coming to Washington and Lee from Syracuse in 1911. He played stellar ball at quarterback for the Generals in 1911 and 1912, in 1911 calling the signal that sent V. P. I. to defeat and broke the jinx that she had held over the White and Blue.

He was assistant coach from 1913-1916, when he accepted the position of head coach at Chicks Springs Military in South Carolina. In 1917, he returned to Washington and Lee as head coach of this Institution. During the war, Bill answered the call and was put in charge of the petty officers' camp at Pelham Bay. He was recalled to W. and L. as head coach of all athletics at the beginning of the 1920 session.

Under the coaching of Raftery, the Generals were able to wrest from Georgia Tech a victory for the first time since the two institutions have met. V. P. I. has been repeatedly defeated during the years he has been coach here. Georgetown likewise fell before the manipulations of the brain of the W. and L. coach.

Not only has his coaching in football met with success, but likewise he has accomplished wonders in the fields of basketball and baseball. Only this year, his cohorts were able to win twice over the winners of the Southern Tournament.

A respecter of men, a good organizer, a real coach!

BY June 9th, every member of the section had reported to the Commanding Officer at the concentration camp at Allentown, Pa., and had been mustered into the service of the United States Army. After some six months of intensive training, the Washington and Lee section (later known as S. S. U. 534), was ordered to New York, and sailed on January 9, 1918, on the British transport Carmania, reaching Liverpool by way of Halifax after fifteen days of rough weather. The trip was uneventful save from the standpoint of scanty, ill-prepared food plus twenty-four-degrees-below-zero weather.

Once in England the movement was swift. Soon after arriving in Liverpool the section was on its way to Morn Hill Camp located at Winchester. This camp was one of England's largest and most efficient army centers, being only four hours from Southampton and a little farther from France. After a few days spent in securing rest and reequipment, S. S. U. 534 proceeded to Southampton where the section boarded the Caesarea. At dusk she put into the channel and dawn announced the arrival at Le Havre. A string of box cars was waiting, rations were distributed, and the third lap was begun, which terminated three days later at Base 1, Camp 1, St. Nazaire. The troops had only started the immense camp, and Americans were very much in evidence. Six weeks were spent here in camp construction, building houses, digging ditches, and assembling automobiles.

On March 2nd orders moved the section to Paris where four days were spent in repainting, repairing, and rebuilding generally twenty Ford ambulances, one Ford Touring Car, and one Ford truck, all of which had seen much service. On March 8th the section convoyed to Versailles where official connection was made with the French Army. The section was assigned for duty to the twelfth division of infantry of the French Army, which division held the reputation of being one of France's most illustrious fighting organization. Now the S. S. U. 534 was separated from the American Army and became part of the independent organization consisting of all the S. S. U. sections, under the command of Percy L. Jones, Col. M. C. U. S. A., who had his headquarters in Paris.

On March 20th the section moved to Pt. St. Maxence and camped on the banks of the Oise. On the 27th it received orders to establish headquarters at Montdidier and join the division. The great Somme offensive of the Germans began about this time. This move had been expected, but the exact striking point was not known until after the section had started for Montdidier. Upon arrival in this city it was found that there had been a split in the lines between the French and the English (this being just prior to the effecting of unity of command under General Foch). Consequently there was great confusion and the section failed to get into touch with its division which had gone into action a little to the left.

Finally about eleven P. M. on the 28th, after having been repeatedly warned by passing patrols to move back, orders were received to proceed to Broyes where the section began the severest kind of work. From Broyes it moved to Esquernay, and the evacuation of wounded from Cantigny, Roquencourt, and nearby points took place day and night.

On April 10th the division was relieved and ordered to the Lorraine front, which was a quiet sector. By special request of General Penet, the division commander, the section remained with this division. General Penet was a very popular commander and was particularly friendly to the section, not only because of the way in which it had conducted the work during its initial experience under fire, but because he was a great admirer of General Robert E. Lee, and knew as much about Washington and Lee University as most of the members of the section. So by way of Beauvais, Meaux, Nantieul, Troyes, Charmes, Chaumont, and Rambervilliers, St. Clemet was reached and headquarters established on the twenty-second.

On July 18th another busy spell began. The division was to follow up the Chateau-Thierry offensive which the U. S. marines had so ably started. Two days were spent in the woods of Villiers Cottrett, and at midnight of the second night a dash was made to Verte Feuille. From this farm as headquarters, the ambulances worked the sector with posts at Vierzy and Ferme La Grange.

As the division advanced the section moved and about August 1st arrived at Hartennes on the big road between Soissons and Chateau Thierry. The office was set up in what had been a very pretty chateau, but the grounds were scattered with old gas shells, dead Germans, Frenchmen and Americans One day a French captain came in the office and excused himself for intruding, but remarked that he was passing and wanted to look in because it happened to be his old home. A little church just across the road with an old graveyard behind was a mass of ruins, the graves turned inside out and dead strewn everywhere. Only one living creature was discovered when the section moved in—an old French woman. This woman said that she had watched the Germans come and go three times, in 1870, in 1914, and this last time, and that their behavior had been the same on all three occasions.

From Hartennes the section worked posts located at Ft. Conde and other points across the Aisne River, and the three posts of Mt. Soissons, Ferme Epritell, and Serches will never be forgotten by anyone who was under fire there. On Mt. Soissons the French gave up efforts to conceal movements, because constant shelling was maintained by the Germans in spite of camouflage. Serches was a particularly unpleasant spot. It was a little village located in a hollow. The Germans dropped gas shells just often enough to keep it in a terrible condition. There was no passing in or out without masks, and when the night was dark driving with masks was almost impossible.

At the beginning of this attack five drivers had been added to the section as reserves. Three of these men were wounded during their first day and the other two were removed a couple of days later. However, the original members of the section had had remarkable luck, and with few exceptions this luck stayed with them throughout the war. It was early in August before the first casualty occurred. Hisle had his arm broken when his ambulance backfired, and a few days later the same thing happened to A. S. Johnston. This with the loss of Blee, Morrison, Johnson, and Benford left the section short of men, and the steady drive was almost too much for the boys. Sometimes more than eighty kilos were covered in a single trip. However, they kept going while the division slowly forged ahead, and on September 15th they crossed the Aisne when the assault on the Chemin des Dames was begun. On September 7th a shell struck a small shelter where Marshall and three Frenchmen were lying. Two of the Frenchmen were killed and Marshall had his foot torn off. The other Frenchman who was unhurt carried Marshall a half-mile on his back to a first aid station.

Another movement began on October 7th. This time Belgium was the destination, and the convoy across country with the stops for dinner and night at little villages was a real holiday. The division went into action again on October 21st and the section set up headquarters at Thielt. The work during this offensive was short but fast and furious while it lasted.

After the armistice the section was decorated for its work during the final stages of the war, and this time the decoration was an army corps one. There were a number of individual citations which came through also for the work of the different boys at various times. The following individuals received the Croix de Guerre in addition to the two citations that had been awarded the section as a whole:

Baker	Hisle	Jones	Morris	Richardson	Womeldorf
Benford	Hintz	Kinnear	Morrison	Riley	Zufall
Cook	Hopkins	Marshall	Pickens	Rowan
Fletcher	Johnston	Meyers	Olson	Shelhammer

The section stayed on at Chreushutem for a while after the armistice, evacuating the sick of the division. On December 12th it was moved to a little village near Dunkerque where it remained doing civilian relief work until March 1st. Shortly after the first of April the section was ordered to Versailles to prepare for the return to the United States. Dunkerque was left in the morning and by that night every car and every man was in Versailles.

The return was made in a short time and discharge took place in the U. S. A. the latter part of May, 1919, just two years after the time of the organization.

A Reminiscence

AS THE last few forms of the 1922 CALYX are almost ready for the presses we experience a feeling of relief. Our work in caring for a developing book has almost passed.

At this time the Manager and Editor look back over the year, which has fled so rapidly, and wonder in what measure they have succeeded in the attainment of the objects they set out to accomplish. The decision lies with the most impartial of judges—the campus public.

We would hope that all will like the 1922 CALYX. There will be faults and mistakes to be sure. There are others who could have done the work better than we, we know. But we hope the mistakes will be fewer than the creditable parts; we hope each reader will find more to praise than to criticise. We hope that our book will be considered a success as successes are considered.

There are many whom we would thank for their assistance and encouragement, but space will permit of the mention of only a few. The staff, as a whole and individually, has worked hard. To their efforts the book is due, and without their efforts the book would have been impossible. We thank them.

To White Studio also are we indebted. The work of this firm has been of a very high order, and their kindness, and their eagerness to coöperate in making this book as good as possible are indeed appreciated.

In particular do we wish to thank the firm of Baker, Jones, Hausauer, Inc. At all times and under all circumstances, they have been extremely courteous and sympathetic. We appreciate the kindnesses they have shown to us, lacking as we were in any technical knowledge of engraving or printing. The good form in which everything is put before you is all due to their painstaking care and efforts.

To these and more are we thankful. The past year has been pleasant and profitable on the whole, and we feel that we have gained something for everything that our connection with the 1922 CALYX has caused us to give up. Whether the 1922 CALYX is received as we have hoped it will be or not, we have done our best and feel that the opportunity has been eminently worth while.

GLUE FOR THE HEART-BROKEN

(A department conducted by Miss Betty B. Leevsit for students in love or in any other kind of trouble.)

Dear Miss Betty: I am a Freshman at W and L. I'm 6 ft. 6 in. tall and my mother says that I'm handsome. I have a girl who has just written me that she does not like me any longer. What can the matter be?

R. F. D.

Dear R. F. D.: You are probably too tall already.

Dear Miss Leavsitt: Frank and I have had a little contest on to see which of us could kiss the most girls in a certain length of time We have both kissed eleven girls. We would like to know if you consider this contest a good thing, or would you advise us to stop?

Frank and Earnest

Dear Frank and Earnest: As you are both even now, I would advise you to stop and call it a "necktie."

Dear Betty: I would like to change my course, but have heard that the dean does not favor many such changes. How should I approach him on the subject?

Yours till Balcony Falls,
Davey Jones.

Dearest Davie: Walk up to the dean boldly, with the air of a 1920 alumnus and favor him with a hearty handshake. This will not fail to make an impression. Then say, "Dean, ol' boy, I want to ask a favor of you. I've heard that you are the right stuff and I know that you won't refuse to do this little thing for me. I want you to change my course. If you do that for me, Dean, I'll dance at your funeral, or do anything else that might fill your heart with joy. What d'ye say, Dean?—That's the old baby! The dean will not be able to withstand such an appeal and will change your course without a murmur.

Betty Dear: I am deeply in love with a girl, but she always turns up her nose at me. What can be the trouble ? Her name is .....

O. Dorr.

Dearest Mr. Dorr: I have looked into the matter and find that the matter is hereditary. Her father manufactured Hydrogen Sulfide (H_2S).

My Dear Betty: I'm to visit some folks on the farm next summer and I've never been to the country before. Could you give me any advice as to how I should act?

C. T. Stoodynt.

Dear C. T.: The only advice I have to give you is this—When you are eating and the farmer's wife asks you to have some corn, don't absent-mindedly pass your glass.

Dear Betty B.: Could you tell me how to use necromantic in a sentence correctly.

Yours til deth,
John Quill.

Johnny Dear: Certainly. If you want to be popular with the girls, you should make your neckromantic.

LITTLE TO ASK

She was the sweetest, most innocent little girl he had ever seen, and he watched her sympathetically as she stood knee-deep in the snow, fumbling in her handbag with tears in her eyes.

"May I help you?" he asked gently, not wishing to frighten her.

She smiled shyly.

"Yes," she answered. "Will you please roll this cigarette for me?"

Heard just before the FANCY DRESS BALL

"Is that the gown you're going to wear to the dance tonight?"

"No, dear, so far I've decided on nothing."

ALL THREATS IGNORED

"What do you like best, Elsie?" he asked as they sat together on the porch hammock

"Ice cream," she answered promptly.

"Scream your head off, I'm going to kiss you anyway!"

DRY REBUKE

Jack: "Didn't you see me downtown yesterday? I saw you twice."

Alma: "I never notice anybody in that condition."

NOT HIS FAULT

Officer to the little boy whom he found lost on the street—"Why didn't you hang on to your mother's skirt?"

"I tried to, but I couldn't reach it," replied the little fellow as he wiped away a tear

HIGH LIFE

She (as they dance): "Where have I met you before? There is something very familiar about the way you put your arm around my waist."

He: "Why don't you remember? I was your very first husband."

Lexington is a unique town, from the Latin "uni," meaning "one," and "equus," meaning horse."

Some people eat their meals as a matter of course, others deposit their money as a matter of principle. But all like girls as a matter of form.

Did you ever notice that the most careful engineers are the most (w)reckless?

A stirring ballad entitled "My barber is a Mason and he shaves me by degrees."

In art work, money should not be its object—nor its objection.

First mention of money in the Bible—"Pharoah receiving a check on the bank of the Nile."

"Congratulations, you sweet thing!" said the sugar refiner to the dead beat.

"This problem seems to be coming out all right," said the math shark, as he ripped a page from his book.

PUZZLE

Do the Freshman hats become larger when being worn?

Answer:—Yes! If they were spread out they would cover only a few yards, but when worn they cover 350 blocks.

The Finals of Other Days

(Apologies to T. Moore)

Oft thinking hard of yore
Ere study's chain has bound me,
I walk to the old gym floor
And see the throng dance round me:
The smiles, the frowns,
The low neck'd gowns,
The words of love then spoken;
The eyes that shone
With corn alone,
The bottles all now broken!
Thus thinking hard of yore
Ere study's chain has bound me,
I dance those Finals o'er
And drink that stuff that drowned me.
When I remember all
The drunks so link'd together
I've seen around me fall
Like leaves in wintry weather,
I feel like one
Who treads alone
Some old dance hall deserted,
Whose couples fed
On liquor red
Have all long since departed!
Thus thinking of the nights
Ere prohibition found me,
Fond memory sheds the lights
Of those old Finals round me.

Ye Dances

(Apologies to T. Gray)

Who could help but move and sway
To such a syncopated lay?
O'er the Gym floor's waxy sheen
The bobb'd hair'd dizzy girls are seen
And W and L men gay;
With antic Sport, and blue-eyed Pleasures,
Frisking light in frolic measures;
Now pursuing, now retreating,
Now in circling troops they meet;
To brisk notes in cadence beating
Glance their many-twinkling feet.
And in the center moves some queen scant-clad and fair;
Where'er she turns, the students homage pay:
With arms sublime that float upon the air
In gliding state she wins her easy way:
O'er her warm cheek and lips that gently swell
The bloom that comes in boxes and all the druggists sell.

(Apologies to Goldsmith)

When lovely woman sends a wire "yes"
And finds too late she cannot dance,
What charm can soothe her lover's sourness?
What art can put him in a trance?
The only art her fault to cover
And prove her not as slow as heck;
To show repentance towards her lover
And get a bid twice, is—to kneck.

HIS OWN FAULT

He had a late date—with his wife. She was to meet him there at three. At four she appeared.
"This is a nice time to get here," he raged when he saw her. "I've spent an hour walking up and down like a fool!"
"But, dear," she cooed sweetly, "I'm not responsible for the way you walk up and down."

Bill and Bob were friends in college. After graduating, they separated and Bill amassed considerable wealth, while Bob did not do so well. One day while walking along, Bob saw Bill approaching and wondered if his success had changed his old friend.
"Why, hello, Bill, old man," he greeted, "I hear you've been making a mint of money!"
"Well, yes," replied his friend, "I'm on easy street now."
"Er-ah, listen, then, old top, can you let me have a ten-spot until tomorrow?"
"No," answered the other, "I'm trying to swing some big deals and I really can't let you have it."
And Bob went away muttering, "Success hasn't changed him a bit."

Ye Legend of Dubyanellgim

(A manuscript found in some old ruins on Castle Hill)

In the days of old, when nights were dark,
And moonlight held its sway,
Dan Cupid pulled a wicked string;
His arrows went to stay.
It happ'd that on a certain eve
The king did hold a dance,
To which the knights around did ride
With horses 'neath their pants.
A knight of Dubyell Order came
Clad in Tuxedo mail.
'Twas steel all o'er, but Cupid knew
His arrows would not fail.
He pulled his bow, and letting fly,
Breaking the mail away,
In the Adam's Apple of the knight
His deadly dart did stay.
It went clear thru and pierced his heart,
Which then was in his throat,
For what saw he but a lady proud
Come riding 'cross the moat.
She came from Castle Sweethriar;
Her hair was bobbed and short;
And soon her face and voice and eyes
Had struck dumb all the court.
Then did the knight of Dubyell pull
Some links from off his suit,
He strode across the great court room
He made a low salute;
Then rising he did give to her
A shining link or two,
And said, "My lady, you can see
I've brought some mail for you."
This started them to talking;
They left the lighted hall.
He said, "You only do I love."
She said, "You love them all."
But the Dubyell knight was mighty
At the art of slinging bull
And landed pretty ladies
Quite quickly as a rule.
And tho she shoveled speedily
And handed back a line
She couldn't match the Errant-Knight
Who'd killed a quart of wine.
But just then down a bat flew
And whistled by her ear,
And she not knowing what it was,
Was filled with deadly fear.
And then dead drunk with terror
She thru the dark did grope,
Crying, "Hic—Won't shome one shave me?"
"Alash, is there no shope?"
This woke the knight of Dubyell.
He grabbed her and she caved
Upon his manly ice-chest,
And he cried out, "She's shaved."

TO A DRY-AD

Whatever else may happen now
The country has gone dry;
The sailor still will have his port,
The farmer have his rye.
The cotton still will have its gin,
The seacoast have its bar,
And each of us will have a bier,
No matter who we are.
But in the end the drys will fail,
For I still have a hunch
The patient still will have his ail,
Some fighter spike his punch.
No matter how our throats they stint,
No matter if our beer's prohib—
The U. S. still will have its mint,
The baby have its bib.
The dryness reign whene'ver we dine,
This dry-talk will remain a sham—
As long as dogs still have their whine
And every druggist has his dram.

Luella opened the window,
Her clothes blew up in the air;
They were dangling on the clothes-line,
So Luella didn't care.

CASE FOR THE JURY

There was a bold wench from Missouri
Who stole the wet stock of a brewery.
When the judge called her case
She saved her disgrace
By giving the case to the jury.

CONFESSION

I could not love thee, dear, so much
If you owned but a Ford,
But since you drive a Packard, sweet,
The way I crave you—Lord!

HE WONDERED

"I thank you for the flowers you sent,"
She said.
"I'm sorry for the words I spoke
Last night.
Your sending me these flowers made all
Things right.
Will you forgive me?" He forgave her.
And as they kissed again beneath
The bowers,
He wondered who the deuce sent her
Those flowers.

CERTAINLY

Judge—"What were you doing chasing those bathing girls at the beach?"
Youth—"I was enjoying the privileges granted me by the Constitution—life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

Athletic—"D'ja go over to the gym and see the broad jump?"
Pathetic—"Naw! Who was She?"

Auto Ode

A man, a lass,
Gallon of gas,
And a brand new touring car;
They both get in;
The four wheels spin;
Her home is left afar!
Four miles they run,
And, O the fun,
And jokes and jolts and jar;
Their talk is sweet;
The maid discreet:
She says, "Don't go too far!"
To drive she tried;
The seat was wide;
But she took in all his talk.
The engine popped,
Stuttered and stopped;
He said, "Get out and walk."
She looked at him,
Across the rim
Of the wheel upon the car;
She shook her head,
"I can't," she said,
"You see—we've gone too far!"
A man, a lass,
But no more gas
In the brand new touring car;
The night grows on
Unto the dawn
We'll leave them where they are!

More Inspiration

She was young, and coy, and pretty,
Blithesome as a summer day,
And he met her out one evening—
Well—in quite the usual way.
How she filled his heart with longing!
"Would," he said, "that she were mine!"
And with no unfeigned persistence
Worshipped daily at her shrine.
One night 'mid dance and music
This enchanting little miss
Brushed his cheek so soft and tempting,
That he boldly stole a kiss.
Next day in the mail a poem—
Laddie sent it to his girl—
Told her that he loved her madly
With his poor heart in a whirl.
Spring came soon with all its fancy
And one balmy, wondrous night
Arm in arm they strolled together
In the moonlight soft and bright.
Time came when they must be parting
And with one long lingering look—
"Don't you think, my dear," she whispered,
"That you now could write a book?"

A NEW DISEASE

The scene was set for a love sob. Mother had been shunted into the kitchen and they were ensconced on the sofa. Quoth he passionately: "My love for you is boundless; my heart beats like a racehorse, my brow is fevered, I've lost my appetite, and there's such a lump in my throat that it impairs my utterance.

"My————"

"Stop!" she cried, "That's not love; that's tonsillitis!"

Oh give me the plunging line
And the quarter-back's husky roar.

"I'm not going to do anything else!" she assented with alacrity.
"Never mind, then."
And he drove off alone.

Beautiful forms and compositions are not made by chance, nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense.

A composition for cheapness and not for excellence of workmanship, is the most frequent and certain cause of the rapid decay and entire destruction of arts and manufactures.
